EDITOR'S LETTER

This month's issue goes past, present and future with one of sport's most historic teams (page 118), two of TV's hottest stars (pages 96 and 128) and one of the summer's biggest movies (page 94). Here, however, is what you won't find in these pages. . . .

Sopranos love

The men of HBO's The Sopranos lead TV's best drama, but it was their comedic talent that was on display during breaks in our photo shoot (page 86). At one point, Steve Schirripa cuddled up to Vincent Curatola, saying, "Look, it's Brokeback Goomba." Michael Imperioli, meanwhile did his best to avoid a threesome.

Tera Patrick's posse

Super Bowl week was more like Tera week here at FHM. Three days after providing us with bedroom home-video tips (page 28), she and her pals strolled the red carpet before partying the night away at our Detroit Super Bowl bash.

Jenny McCarthy

You won't find everybody's favorite Goldilocks in these pages, but next issue she'll be here to share her favorite bedtime tales. She'll also kick off a new monthly column in which she dispenses sex advice as only Jenny can. Life-changing insight is only 30 days away!

Tiny racers

Drag racing is for kids! At least that's what we learned while checking out the scene at Pomona, CA's Auto Club Raceway (page 102). Some kids are as young as 8! And cars go up to 85 mph!

Enjoy the issue,

Scott Gramling

WHO THE HELL ARE YOU? The month's finest memory wreckers

Blue whale tongues couple
So much for the stereotype that fat guys are slow and lazy. When this jolly intruder saw Vanessa Tafoya of Garden Grove, CA, kissing her boyfriend, he apparently dropped his ice-cream cone and sprang into action. "This leaping goofball sure got in the way!" she writes. He sure did! In the way of you, your tank-topped man and the horse whisperer to the left. Well done, big guy.

Sniffer spoils groping
"This should have been a hot picture of me getting molested by my friends," writes Karen Ladouceur of Tucson, AZ. "Instead I got a picture of me getting molested by my friends and some creepy guy." Or perhaps just a man too shy to ask a pretty girl what brand of shampoo she uses.

These two wore banana suits to Mardi Gras. They deserve this shaming.

YOUR SISTER IS HOT!

"I used to be a tomboy," writes 20-year-old Letha Talbot of Albany, OR. "But now I'm a woman—a fact my older brother Cody can't accept."

Cody's buds can, and they always comment on Letha's looks. "Still, Cody is in total denial," she says. "I figure if you guys judged me to be hot, that would show him. So, what's the verdict?"

Wake up, Cody. Your sister is undeniably hot! She's too old to trick into joining the convent, so we suggest you take up a martial art to fend off all her horny suitors. Ladies, is your brother loath to admit you're sexy? Send the details to letters@FHMUS.com and attach a picture of yourself.

This South Florida duo met while studying in Australia. Two years later, they dish on each other's deepest, darkest secrets

We steal!

Diana "When we're together, it's a girlie nightmare." Crystal "No one can out-shop us." Diana "Especially when it comes to shoes. Between us, we share more than 200 pairs. Well, sort of. Crystal always borrows my most expensive heels and never returns them."

We distract!

Diana "Once, we were walking by a golf course and saw two cute guys on a golf cart. We started blowing them kisses and they ran into a tree." Crystal "That was awesome, but Diana was embarrassed by it. She doesn't like people noticing us. She's a total prude."

We humiliate!

Crystal "One time, when a guy hit on me at a club, I told him Diana and I were girlfriends. She ran away." Diana "Crystal is easily embarrassed too—especially by her laugh. She sounds like a fat pirate. In public, though, she fake giggles like a Japanese schoolgirl."

We withhold!

Diana "Men don't know how hard we are to get." Crystal "Especially Diana. Diana's a virgin." Diana "Shut up! I'll be talking to a guy and she'll walk up and say, 'Good luck. She's waiting for marriage.'" Crystal "Why shouldn't I? Those men have a right to know."

FROSTING

RECIPE FOR BUNNYCIDE!

A reader shares his twisted Easter cake

I baked this Easter Bunny especially for FHM," writes Carl Huber of Webster, NY. "The rabbit's been speared through the back with his own giant carrot—his days of delivering eggs are over!"

"This gruesome treat took three packages of cake mix, three cans of frosting and two nights to make," Carl says. "There's even more to see when you cut into my creation! I used an entire bottle of red food coloring for his guts. Naturally, that's the most delicious part."

But killing the lamest of all holiday mascots wasn't Carl's original concept. "I thought about baking a Jesus, but I wanted to avoid the inevitable 'body of Christ' jokes," Carl says. "Happy Easter, FHM!"

You're a culinary whiz, Carl. We're already looking forward to Christmas, when Rudolph loses his shit and goes all Texas Chainsaw Massacre on Santa. Make it a cheesecake, please!

WHAT'S WRONG WITH FHM?

Ask Dad—mistakes happen. But, spot one in FHM and you win $20 if we print your letter. Say the dumbest thing we hear all month, on the other hand, and we demand the same in return.

Steven Solomon, Santa Fe, NM

◆ In your evolution of the motorcycle story in the March issue, you labeled the Ducati 750 SS incorrectly. You called it the Ducati 750 Sport, which was a fugly yellow color.

Richard E. Verbanc, Wilmington, DE

IDIOT OF THE MONTH

The caption for the March story about ski poles that conceal flasks reads, "The wife thinks I quit smoking . . . pole." The man is drinking—not smoking. That'll be $20, please.

Frank, here's a fun experiment for you to try: Go to your nearest redneck bar and survey all the patrons as to whether they've ever smoked pole. When you've been released from intensive care, you can mail us that $20.

CAPTAIN KA-CHING!

FHM's wealth-dispensing hero returns!

FREE MONEY!
Need assistance of the financial variety? Send your plea to Captain Ka-ching!, c/o FHM, 110 Fifth Ave., New York, NY 10011.

Immediately following his debut last fall, Captain Ka-ching's mailbox was deluged with sob stories from saps in need of cash. Unfortunately, winter arrived soon after and Cappy burned most of those letters to keep his secret lair heated. These three escaped the furnace.

New nose needed

I've got a massive schnoz and I'm convinced it's the reason I haven't touched a boob in six months. I just got a consultation at a plastic surgeon—it'll cost $4,000 to get this beak fixed! Please, Captain Ka-ching, help me get a nose that fits my face.
Peter O'Donnell
Madison, WI

Didn't your mother tell you that beauty is only skin deep? Mine either—hence the mask. Still, four thou? Sorry, Pete. I advise you grow a backwoodsman-style beard to distract people from your enormous snout. Here's $30 for a beard-grooming kit.

Date-night disaster

Recently I went out with a girl I met at a party. She was really hot, so I went all out—we're talking the movies and a lobster dinner. I dropped $160 on her, and all I got was a lousy handshake at the end of the night! Now I want to take out another girl and don't have the cash. A little help?
Ryan Sussman
Toledo, OH

Not even a courtesy hug? You must be a real looker. Probably quite the gentleman too. As a public service to the fairer sex, I must keep you from re-entering the dating pool. Request denied, Romeo!

Whiskey soured

Recently, while unloading groceries with my fiancee, our new bottle of Crown Royal fell and broke. I watched in horror as our favorite drink trickled down the driveway—$40.87 worth of booze that could have fueled nights of uninhibited lust! Can you lift our crushed spirits?
Robert Baca
Las Cruces, NM

Ordinarily, I'd tell you to get bent, but I happen to be a whiskey man myself—it's what gets me through reading letters from losers. Here's a check for $40.87 for a new bottle. Be sure to pour a shot out for your homey, the captain.

IDIOT SON!

"My son, Matt, is an avid FHM reader," writes Steven Parr of St. Louis, MO. "He's also a loser. He's 31 and still lives at home. Instead of job hunting, he hides in his room playing Xbox and creating suspicious smells. I love the kid, but he's a bum. I've tried kicking him out, but his mom always saves him. I figure if I can shame him in his favorite magazine maybe he'll clean up his act—or at least start paying us some rent."

Admirable tough-love tactics, Mr. Parr. Readers, do you deserve to be ripped a new one by your dad? Have the old man write to letters@FHMUS.com and tell us how you've let him down. Be sure to have him attach a picture of the two of you. The best fatherly beat-downs will earn $50 and appear in a future issue.

THE BURNING QUESTION!

Does Ron Jeremy have a bit part in Ghostbusters?

"I swear adult-film legend Ron Jeremy is an extra in Ghostbusters," writes Tim Lancaster of Portland, ME. "My buddy Ed says no way. Can you guys settle this?" FHM placed a call to the Hedgehog.

Ron, are you in Ghostbusters?
Yes, I am—well, the theatrical widescreen edition anyway. I'm pretty far off to the side, so I get cut off if you're watching the TV version.

How did you end up in it?
I was doing a lot of extra work in New York in the early '80s. I still do. I've appeared in around 20 films where I keep my pants on. I've even been credited in movies I was cut out of. Look closely at the credits for Ronin and it says Ron Hiatt as a fishmonger. I use Hiatt or Hyatt if a company is squeamish about crediting Jeremy.

Were you slimed in Ghostbusters?
Yeah. I remember having to wash it off my clothes at home, but you don't see it in the movie. All you see is me pointing up at the sky. But I was definitely slimed. It was a lot of fun.

FHM BAR ROOM JOKES

A gorilla walks into a bar and orders a martini to the amazement of the barkeep.

When the bartender gives the gorilla the martini, he's further surprised to see that the ape is holding out a 20 dollar bill.

The man takes the 20. Then, he decides to see just how smart the gorilla is, so he hands the ape back only a dollar change.

The gorilla quietly sips the martini until the barkeep breaks the silence. "We don't get too many apes in here," he says.

The gorilla replies, "At $19 a drink, I'm not surprised."

A woman takes her lover home while her husband is at work. Her 8-year-old son comes home without warning and, upon seeing the couple, hides in the closet.

Shortly after that, the woman's husband comes home unexpectedly. She quickly pushes her lover into the closet.

"Dark in here," the boy says.

"Yes, it is," the man replies.

"I have a baseball. Want to buy it?" the boy asks, adding, "My dad's outside."

"OK, how much?" the man asks.

"$250," the boy says.

Two weeks later, the same situation occurs. When the man goes into the closet, the boy says, "Dark in here."

"Yes, it is," the lover replies.

"I have a baseball glove," the boy says.

"How much?" the man sighs.

"$750," the boy answers.

"Sold," the man says.

Days later, the dad asks the boy if he wants to play catch. "I can't," the boy says. "I sold my ball and glove for $1,000."

"You're fleecing your friends!" the dad yells. "I'm taking you to confession."

They arrive at the church and the boy steps into the confessional booth.

"Dark in here," he says.

The priest replies, "Oh, don't start that shit again."

A seaman meets a pirate with a peg leg, a hook and an eye patch in a marina bar.

"How did you end up with the peg leg?" the seaman asks.

"A shark bit my leg off," the pirate says.

"And the hook?" the seaman asks.

"A rival pirate cut my hand off with a sword," the pirate answers.

"And what about the eye patch?" the seaman asks.

"A seagull dropping fell into my eye," the pirate replies.

"You lost your eye to a seagull dropping?" the sailor asks in disbelief.

"Well," the pirate explains, "it was my first day with the hook."

Al Kingston, Arizona City, AZ

Bill and Mark are out walking in the country one night when Bill points out a grove of trees. "That's where I had sex for the first time," he says. "We made love while her mother stood nearby and watched over us!"

Shocked, Mark asks, "Did her mother say anything?"

Bill replies, "Yeah, 'Baaaaah!'"

Peter Ruggiero, Plains, GA

JOKE OF THE MONTH!

An elderly couple is having an anniversary dinner when the husband asks his wife, "Do you remember the first time we had sex together, 50 years ago? We went behind this tavern, you leaned against the fence and I made love to you."

"Yes," she says. "I remember it well."

"Why don't we do it again for old times' sake?" he asks, and the wife agrees.

A bemused police officer overhears them and decides to keep an eye on the pair to make sure there's no trouble.

Behind the tavern, he observes the couple drop their drawers. The wife grabs the fence and suddenly the two begin having the most furious, athletic sex the cop has ever seen. It lasts for a full hour. Finally, the old folks collapse, panting.

Amazed, the cop approaches them. "That was something else!" he says. "How do you muster such energy at your age?"

The old man replies, "Fifty years ago that wasn't an electric fence."

SHOOT A HOME MOVIE!

If you happen to be dating Paris Hilton, here's how to make millions

1 Preproduction

"Making a movie with your woman can be a sticky subject," Tera says. "Approach it as role-playing—tonight you're porn stars. Film in a hotel room to make it feel exclusive. And always reassure her that she keeps the tape."

2 Ease her in

"Encourage her to strip in front of the camera to break her in. If she wants to stop there, stop there. Give her direction, but don't be pushy. Don't be like, 'Bend over and shove a vibrator up your butt.' Unless she's into that."

3 Clothing

"Make sure the outfit flatters her and that it will make her feel good. You have to know your woman. If she has great legs, put her in stockings and garters. If she's a tomboy, put her in boy shorts and a tanktop."

4 Lighting

"Overhead fluorescent lights are a no-no, so don't shoot in the bathroom. A dimly lit lamp is good—I love the burgundy-colored lampshades in my room. Or try going with lots of vanilla-scented candles. Women love them."

5 Props

"Your leading lady may want some props to play with. A good short list includes champagne, whipped cream, chocolate sauce, feathers and massage oil for her to rub into her skin while she's doing her striptease."

6 The set

"Porn stars are grateful when we get to have sex in bed—we get bruised up doing it in weird places, like on a forklift. The familiarity of a bed will make your girl feel comfortable, and use your best, non-patterned sheets."

7 Positions

"If she's ready for sex on camera, go with a position that stretches the body to help hide fat. Doggy-style is the best, because it allows your woman to stick her butt out. Reverse cowgirl looks great, but you have to be a pro to do it."

8 Camera technique

"Go handheld. The first time I tried using a tripod at home, I shot nothing but my feet. Handheld is more fun, and you don't need to stop and start to adjust the camera position. Even experienced porn stars hate that."

9 Screening

"Watch your movie together right away—you'll both get turned on for more sex. After that, lock it in a safe. If you break up, though, destroy it. I still watch my old home movies. If they're good, they bring back good memories."

Give her direction but don't be pushy

INSTANT WISDOM
- In 131 years, 11 horses have won the Triple Crown. The last was Affirmed in 1978.
- At last year's Kentucky Derby, seven superfecta bets hit for an $833,000 payday on a $1 bet.

PROFIT ON THE PONIES!

The Triple Crown's three-pronged attack on your wallet begins. Lessen this year's bloodshed with our OTB-tested betting guide

KENTUCKY DERBY

Track Churchill Downs, Louisville, KY; one and 1/4 miles
Race day May 6, 2006
What to watch for Churchill Downs's famously long final stretch gives horses in the pack more time to dig in and run down the leader.

Betting tip "If you're betting to win at the Derby, skip the favorite," says Mike Penna, host of the Lexus Equine Forum on Lexington, KY's WLXG 1300 AM. "Since '85, only two favorites have won the Run for the Roses."

PREAKNESS

Track Pimlico, Baltimore, MD; one and 3/16 miles
Race day May 20, 2006
What to watch for Pimlico's sharp turns allow the front pony to hug the rail, while horses attempting to pass on the outside get swept wide.

Betting tip "If the Derby winner is in the field, look for him to finish 'in the money' [in the top three]," Penna says. "In the last nine years, the Derby winner has won the Preakness six times."

BELMONT STAKES

Track Belmont Park, Elmont, NY; one and 1/2 miles
Race day June 10, 2006
What to watch for Belmont's dirt track is the largest in thoroughbred racing. Most horses that run on dirt aren't bred for such a long distance, which sometimes yields flukey results.

Betting tip "Preakness winners usually stay hot at Belmont," Penna says. "Of the last nine winners at Pimlico, two have won in New York, and five have come in second."

HORSIE SLANG!

CLOSER A horse that runs best toward the end of a race.

FAST TRACK Optimum dirt-track conditions: dry and even.

FURLONG One-eighth of a mile

LENGTH The length of a horse from nose to tail, which is roughly eight feet.

NOSE The smallest advantage a horse can win by.

POST A horse's position in the starting gate.

SCRATCH When a horse is taken out of a race before the start.

ROOKIE BLUNDERS!

"Don't bet every race," says Ron Rippey, Daily Racing Form's newly crowned handicapper of the year, about an average day spent at the track. "If you win, don't put all of your winnings into the next race. Poor money management is the biggest mistake people make."

HOW TO SPREAD THE CHEDDAR

Keep it simple: One horse in one race. It's easier than Tara Reid!

What you can usually expect to rake in betting $2 on a 5:1 steed on the average 10-horse race

WIN Your horse finishes first $10 (+ your $2 bet)

PLACE Your horse finishes first or second $4 (+ your $2 bet)

SHOW Your horse finishes in the top three $2 (+ your $2 bet)

Go all in: Multiple picks could make you a thousand-aire!

The average wins on $2 bets at the Derby between 1998 and 2004

EXACTA $500 PICKING THE FIRST TWO FINISHERS IN THE EXACT ORDER THEY COME IN

TRIFECTA $5,000 PICKING THE FIRST THREE FINISHERS IN THE EXACT ORDER THEY COME IN

SUPERFECTA $55,000 PICKING THE FIRST FOUR FINISHERS IN THE EXACT ORDER THEY COME IN

Trust the experts: They're professional degenerates, after all

In the last nine Triple Crown races, five favorites have won and three more have been in the money. B+ effort!

Is $100 enough to pimp a ride at the car shop?

GRAND TOTAL $98.54 WITH TAX!

Skull valves

Everything about your tires, even the air valves should scream badass. Though they might deter your mechanic from checking the PSI, these ruby-eyed skulls will surely warn would-be tire slashers that you and your ride are not to be messed with.

Pedals

It's likely no one but you will ever see this set of pedal replacements known as "The Predator," so is this an essential purchase? It's called "The Predator." There is no question.

Dragon steering wheel cover

Harness the power of mythical beasts stitched onto your wheel grip. Hold on tight and you should have dragon imprints on your hands all day. If anyone asks, you got them in Nepal.

Car jewelry

Replace the air-freshener forest growing around your rearview with this miniature spinner.

Camo Green duct tape

Because silver is dull and the camo pattern based on rust and unpaid parking tickets wasn't available.

Red Howl tag

State slogans such as "Famous Potatoes" and "Birthplace of Aviation" are OK, but a howling wolf is better.

Amber revolving light

Why would you need a police-style light that plugs into your dashboard lighter? Because it's a great way to meet women, cruise through traffic and justify a handlebar mustache.

BLACK HOLES

Tires come in all kinds—just like sausage! Here's the difference

1 BF Goodrich All-Terrain T/A; $87

"Off-road tires often have a rubber compound that's cut-resistant," says Kevin Rohlwing of the Tire Industry Association. "The lateral grooves help grip in mud."

2 Bridgestone Blizzak; $74

"Snow tires have grooves called sipes that displace water that builds between the rubber and ice," Rohlwing says. "Driving on pavement will wear them out faster."

3 Michelin HydroEdge; $85

"Rain tires channel water from underneath to prevent hydroplaning," Rohlwing says. "They're designed for year-round conditions, so they're a great tire for the average guy."

4 Pirelli P Zero Nero; $180

"High-performance tires are good for dissipating water but they will not perform well in snow," Rohlwing says. "That's why they are sometimes known as summer tires."

TRAIL HELP

Avoid a smack from Ma Nature with these off-road tips

Get maps
"When people run out of gas, it's usually because they don't know how far they're driving," says Bill Burke, of 4-Wheeling America driving school in Fruita, CO.

Check the gear
"Pay attention to what gear you're in and whether the parking brake is on," Burkes says. "One client forgot he was in reverse and rolled into a mineshaft."

Steer into the tip
"If the front tire goes into a ditch and the car starts teetering sideways, you need to turn into it and let it roll out," Burke says. "Keep the car's weight down."

ADVICE

ASK BETH & ISAAC!

She's an FHM cover star. He's matchmaker of the high seas. Together they'll fix your dismal life

I'm haunted!

Q Every time I break up with my girlfriend she finds a way to get me back. How can I keep her away?
She Won't Leave, Glen Cove, NY

A Beth To make a true, clean break you have to be unlovable. Your goal is to make her hate you, and the easiest way to do that is to ignore her. Delete her number and e-mail. Don't return her calls. Have your buddies tell her that you've turned into a bastard. Give it two weeks: After that, she'll be sufficiently devastated to leave you alone. If that's what you want, of course.
Isaac She knows what buttons to push, but it's your fault for making them available. When she calls, don't talk—a woman can talk you out of anything. Don't open the door when she comes over; use the peephole. That's why it exists. A guy who broke up with his old lady invented the peephole. Because once you see and smell that girl, you'll want her. You have to disengage. This woman must be hot to have so much power over you. I'd like to meet her. I know how to disengage after I get some.

Women like a man who can take charge when he wants

I'm whupped!

Q My girlfriend kicks my ass in pool, darts, video games, you name it. I know it's petty, but I hate it. Help.
Beaten by a Girl, Southfield, MI

A Beth I'm with you on this. I'm competitive as well—I kick my boyfriend's ass when we play one-on-one hoops. You need to practice so that next time you play her you can hold your own. Whatever you do, don't sulk. Sulking is a huge turn-off. If she keeps beating you, lose with an air of confidence and be consoled by the fact that your girl prefers shooting pool to watching The View.
Isaac Find a game she can't beat you in. An old girlfriend of mine would kick my ass in tennis, but she couldn't bowl to save her life. Any time I got mad, I'd take her bowling—but I wouldn't tell her that's where we were going until we got there. I'd say, "Hey, let's go get something to eat." Then, in the car, it was, "Why don't we grab one of those burgers you love at the bowling alley." Then I'd kick that broad's ass.

HOW TO APOLOGIZE EFFECTIVELY

Beth says "Make her believe that you think it was your fault even if you know otherwise. After that, never bring it up again."

Isaac says "Go with poetry. If you actually write it, that's 100 points, but even if you copy it out of a book, that's at least 50."

I'm bored!

Q Sex with my wife has become a big production—it's scented candles, fresh sheets, rose petals and soft music every time. How do I make things raw and spontaneous?
Sleeping With Martha, Poway, CA

A Beth Next time you catch her cooking, start kissing her softly. Don't wait for a reaction. Keep going. Don't stop until both of you are out of breath and lying pantsless on the floor. She'll love it. Women like a man who can take charge when he wants. And what's more, you'll get to have sex without listening to Journey's "Faithfully" in the background.
Isaac Tell her you want to re-christen every room in the house. Tell her you want sex on the kitchen floor—which I've done. Let me tell you, I've burned eggs. Catch her when she least expects it. Try it at the beach, at the theater, or early in the morning. If you're over 30, though, take that morning piss first. Trust me.

BEER

LOCAL LEGENDS

Road-tripping? Get plastered like a townie by shotgunning these top regional brews

Genesee Cream Ale

Rochester, NY

The popularity of Genny Cream Ale, like pubic Afros, peaked in the '70s. Even 24-hour brewing couldn't keep it on shelves. Sales have since slowed, but it's still a favorite in Philadelphia and at Buffalo, NY's Anchor Bar, home of the original Buffalo wing.

Point Special

Stevens Point, WI

First brewed in 1857, Point Special was available exclusively in Wisconsin for 133 years. It crossed the Minnesota border in '90, and 13 years later took gold at the Great American Beer festival.

Narragansett

Providence, RI

In the '60s, eight out of every 10 beers served in Rhode Island was a 'Gansett. But in '81, the one-time official beer of the Red Sox fell under Pabst's control and was brewed limitedly out of Indiana. Today, the label is back in the hands of Rhode Islanders.

Huber Premium

Monroe, WI

The brew house that eventually became the Huber Brewing Company was producing beer even before Wisconsin was a state. This lager bearing the company name won a bronze medal at the 2002 World Beer Championships.

Iron City

Pittsburgh, PA

The Pittsburgh Brewing Company recently declared bankruptcy after the city threatened to cut off the brewery's water supply due to unpaid bills dating back nearly a decade. And yet, this local staple flows on as it has for the past 140 years.

Utica Club

Utica, NY

This upstate New York classic was the first beer licensed for sale after Prohibition (a fact every can proudly reminds you of). Post-ban America was so beer-thirsty that a truck on the very first shipment was hijacked and later found empty.

Rhinelander

Monroe, WI

Huber Brewing picked up this area favorite after the Rhinelander Brewing Company closed in 1967. Despite its substantial following in the great cheesy North, it's the only Huber label not available in bottles.

La Crosse Lager

La Crosse, WI

Popular in Wisconsin and the northern Chicagoland area, La Crosse Lager is aged longer than most beers—and it's done in six 54-foot-high, 115,000-gallon tanks painted up as the world's largest six-pack.

Shiner Blonde

Shiner, TX

Like shotgun racks on pickups, the Shiner label is a Texas institution. According to company lore, early brewmaster Kosmos Spoetzl used to drive iced kegs around in his Ford Model T, serving brew to parched farmers.

DEATH

ILLUSTRATIONS BY ANDY PARKER

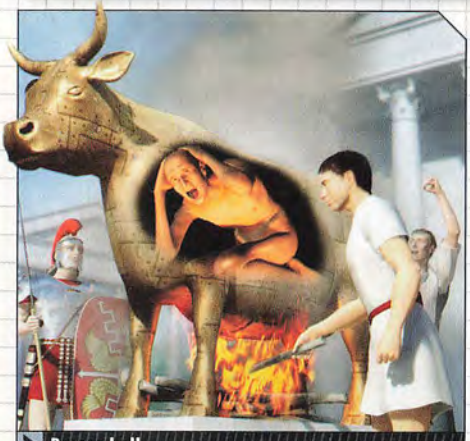
CHOOSE THY DEATH! How do you want to go out? Tell us which of these executions you'd pick if you had to, and see how others vote at FHMUS.com/death. Go, Spanish donkey!

MORTALITY

'ANY LAST WORDS?'

Whether you're for the death penalty or against it, one thing is certain: Execution ain't what it used to be

The electric chair? Firing squad? Both are scary and inhumane ways to be put down—if you're a little girl. As Geoffrey Abbott explains in his new book Execution, those sentenced to die by today's courts have it easy. Take these, for example.



Brazen bull

Most famously used by the Romans to barbecue Christians, this device is a life-sized, hollow brass sculpture of a bull. A martyr is forced into the beast's belly through a trapdoor. A fire is then stoked underneath, slowly cooking him to death. According to Abbott, "Reeds are fitted into the bull's nostrils to make screams of agony sound like bull bellows."

Iron maiden

Some argue there's only one Iron Maiden—and they're heroes of metal. But, another maiden was reportedly used during the Spanish Inquisition. "A victim is led into a metal figure shaped like a person and lined with spikes," Abbott says. "The door is then closed, impaling him." Both Iron Maidens cause the ears of non-believers to bleed.

SAVINGS

FUNERALS FOR LESS

A miser's guide to saying bye

Bury Nana without dipping into your rainy-day divorce fund, thanks to these tips from Jerry Richardson of Sunset Discount Funeral in Salt Lake City, UT.

Embalming

"Embalming isn't always required by law. If it's a closed-casket ceremony, you can refrigerate the body overnight and place it in the casket just prior to the viewing."

Hair and makeup

"A lot of times families come in the day of the service and help prepare the body. They're doing their own hair and makeup anyway, so they might as well come in and do the deceased's."

Spanish donkey

What sounds like a boudoir maneuver involving fists, spurs and a saddle is in fact a method of execution used by Spain's army up until the 20th century. A nude victim straddles a V-shaped wall on wheels. "Muskets or cannonballs are tied to his ankles," Abbott says. "Gradually, he's split in two." And that's the last time the world heard from the Spanish army.

Cauldron

Another way of express-mailing Christians to Jesus was this method, in which a pot is placed upside-down on the stomach. Mice are put underneath and a fire is lit on top, which drives the rodents to escape by any means necessary. "Eventually, they burrow through the victim's stomach and entrails," Abbott says. "I've heard of indigestion, but no thank you."

Necklacing

American gangs have gotten lazy, what with their guns and bullets. South African thugs are bit more hands-on, dousing tires in gas, putting them around victims' necks and lighting them on fire. "Fumes penetrate the lungs, and rubber sears the body," Abbott says. "It's slow and horrendous." Not unlike any conversation that follows, "We need to talk."

Sewn into an ass

The ancient Greeks had flair when exterminating Christians, which was done by sewing them up into the bodies of dead donkeys. "Your head is left sticking out and honey is smeared on your face," Abbott says. "This is to attract bees. You're also fed rich food to cause you to excrete inside of the donkey." Crapping in someone else's ass? How German!

DEATH CLOCK!

Found a corpse? Now you can tell how long it's been rotting

The University of Tennessee studies outdoor decomposition on its body farm, a land plot home to nearly 400 human corpses. Here's founder Dr. Bill Bass on what it's like to die al fresco.

0-2 hours "As enzymes begin to eat away at the body, a number of critters are attracted to the smell, blowflies being the first. They stay inside the body's moist orifices laying eggs."

3-6 hours "Eggs start hatching into maggots and continue hatching for days. The largest maggots would be from the first hatch and tell you how long the person has been dead."

12-36 hours "The muscles stiffen and rigor mortis sets in. At the same time, bacteria accumulate in the blood, breaking it down and turning blood vessels black and blue under the skin."

3-5 days "Bacteria in the digestive tract build up gases, which bloat the body up. Acidic fluids leak out of all of the orifices. Sometimes the abdomen breaks open and starts leaking too."

5-8 days "Now you can see a dark stain around the body where its acids have killed the vegetation. After five days, hair starts sliding off, which falls in one piece so that it looks like a toupee."

One month "At this point the skin is starting to turn black and brown, but it's hard to see because all kinds of red and orange molds start growing on it. Some of them are very pretty."

Six months "By now maggots have eaten the internal organs, all the fluids have leaked out and wind has been blowing through, so you're pretty much left with mummified remains."

Location

"The service doesn't have to be in a church; it can be anywhere you want. You can make appetizers and do it in your living room, have a barbecue at an outdoor park or hold it at a ski resort."

Casket

"You can build your own casket out of cardboard if you want—just make sure the bottom doesn't fall out. You don't even need to use a casket. A heavy canvas would work just fine."

PIPES OF >> DEATH!

Stroke deeper with bats banned by the Amateur Softball Association

Before a bat enters ASA league play, Washington State University's Sports Science Laboratory fires on it with a softball cannon. If hits fly off at an average of 98 mph or more, that bat is banned. "We've had a lot of broken jaws and a pitcher lost an eye because of these bats," says San Francisco Softball League director Tom Sandoval. So watch out for the latest lethal weapons.

Worth Mayhem MAY120

www.worthsports.com

A 14-inch barrel makes this the John Holmes of slugging tools. Usually, this type of design would require thick barrel walls that deliver no bounce. It's made from an Aramid composite strong enough to support its length and thin walls, which produces plenty of bounce. Skilled batsmen can crank balls more than 450 feet.

Miken T22C6

www.mikensports.com

The T22 is named after the periodic number of titanium, which forms the inner shell of the barrel. The same metal found on cruise missiles ensures that over half of the barrel is a sweet spot. Titanium bats are so lethal that the material has been banned since the early '90s. If only the same were true for Zubaz pants.

Easton SCN2 Synergy CNT Plus

www.easton.com

The Synergy is made of thin plies of fiberglass bonded together by carbon nanotubes, which act like a metallic superglue. This allows Easton to create a barrel with huge, rebound-inducing flex that still springs back to its original shape without dents or cracks. Too bad this technology can't do the same for Billy Joel's car.

INSTANT WISDOM

◆ Softball's origins can be traced back to an 1887 Harvard-Yale Thanksgiving Day football game where one fan threw a boxing glove at another who then hit it with a pole.

HITTER'S CHOICE

Dr. Robert Adair, author of The Physics of Baseball, on how to cork a baseball bat

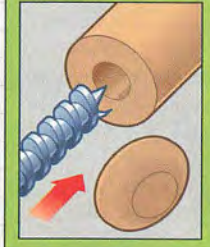
1 CUT



Carefully lop the cap off the top of the bat. Put your bat in a lathe and drill a hole in the end several inches deep and an inch and a quarter in diameter. "The barrel is so strong that drilling won't weaken it," Adair says.

2 FILL

By drilling, you've already removed an ounce of wood. Replace that with a half an ounce of cork. "Some players have even put super balls in there," Adair says. "What you're trying to do is make the bat a little bit lighter."

3 SEAL

Glue the top back on and slather it in tobacco juice so your handiwork isn't discovered by the umpire. "In the end, corking bats is pure superstition," Adair says. "If it does anything good, it's 100 percent mental."

HOW TO ORDER A CUERVO BLACK ON THE ROCKS

Ordering a Cuervo Black on the rocks can be a rocky experience (pun intended) for the first-time consumer. Follow these steps carefully and you will reach the promised land of milk and honey or, in this case, incredibly smooth tequila.

STEP ONE

Walk up to the bar. Putting one foot in front of the other is generally the preferred method.

STEP TWO

Order a Cuervo Black on the rocks by saying, "I'll have a Cuervo Black on the rocks." Use "please" at your discretion.

STEP THREE

Stick to your guns. You might get some quizzical looks from the bartender or your friends, but ignore them – you'll be happy you did.

STEP FOUR

Sit back, relax, and enjoy the perfectly aged smoothness of Cuervo Black – you've earned it.

STEP FIVE

Watch as your friends' faces become flush with envy.

HOW TO ORDER A CUERVO BLACK AND COLA

As with ordering a Cuervo Black on the rocks, for first-time consumers, ordering a Cuervo Black and cola can be a harrowing experience. But like riding a bike, once you learn how, you'll always have it down.

STEP ONE

Make your way up to the bar. If the bar is crowded, this could be significantly more difficult than it sounds.

STEP TWO

Ask the bartender for a Cuervo Black and cola. Our apologies to ginger ale, orange soda and root beer.

STEP THREE

Remove the straw and put it on the bar (throwing it may upset your bartender), because real men don't drink Cuervo Black and cola through straws.

STEP FOUR

Revel in the new, super-premium experience that is Cuervo Black.

STEP FIVE

If your friends ask you for a taste, tell them they need to get some Cuervo Black of their own.

HOW DOES CUERVO BLACK GET TO BE SO SMOOTH?

Take a journey with us to Mexico so we can show you how Jose Cuervo makes this super-smooth, super-premium tequila. Yes, this will be on the quiz afterward.

STEP ONE

In the fields near Tequila, Mexico, Cuervo's own agave farmers skillfully harvest the highest-quality blue agave plants with lightning-fast speed. During this step, it's best to keep your distance.

STEP TWO

The agaves hitch a ride to Cuervo's 200-year-old distillery, La Rojeña, where their juice is extracted and distilled to become – cue drumroll – Jose Cuervo's Black Medallion blend.

STEP THREE

Cuervo Black is then aged in charred-oak barrels for over 12 months, giving it a smooth flavor similar to whiskey. We know that's probably longer than your longest relationship, but some things are worth waiting for.

STEP FOUR

Not to brag or anything, but Cuervo Black has already won awards for its smoothness, including the highest honor from the Mexican Academy of Tequila.* But don't worry, we won't let it go to our heads.

STEP FIVE

Cuervo Black comes from Jose Cuervo, the world's #1 tequila. Enough said.

* Mexican Academy of Tequila Tasting Panel, December 8, 2005, among añejo tequilas with less than 100% agave.

UNICYCLE DAREDEVIL!

Get extreme with half the hardware of a bike

Kris Holm is a whiz on the unicycle, and he isn't even a clown—though he is from Canada. The Vancouver native is a pioneer in the sport of mountain unicycling and has conquered terrains worldwide, including the Great Wall of China. Here's what he's learned on one wheel.

Danger

"I've ridden within mere inches of the edge of a 2,600-foot-high cliff," Holm says. "I typically don't have 'oh shit' moments. If you do, you probably shouldn't be there in the first place."

Safety

"Even though you fall a lot, unicycling is safer than biking," Holm says. "The speeds tend to be slower. It's like jumping off a skateboard. You can usually get your feet underneath you when you fall. On a bicycle you go over the handlebars face first."

Absorption

"The most important thing when you drop off something big is absorbing shock properly," Holm says. "That means you need to always keep rolling. The worst thing you can do on a unicycle when you land is stop dead."

Spills

"The worst fall I've ever taken was riding down a volcano in Mexico at about a 17,000-foot elevation," Holm says. "I fell and went flying head-first 15 feet through the air, landed on my head and cracked my helmet." Damn, shoddy unicycling helmets!

Remember when you were first learning to play golf? How you couldn't get the ball out of the greenside bunker? And when you did, you would blast it out into the bunker on the other side of the green? Those days are over. Here's how to get it right.

Play the ball in the back of your stance. Take your club back until it's perpendicular to the ground. When you swing down, try to hit two inches behind the ball so that you take a lot of sand. That will deaden the impact so the ball lofts gently out of the bunker.

Incredibly, your feet aren't as gnarly as they could be

Let's face it: Anniversaries exist to be forgotten. But if there's one to observe this year—and maybe even blow some cash on—it's the 20-year celebration of Etnies skate sneakers.

Headed by former world champion skater Pierre André Senizergues, Etnies first made an impact on the scene when Senizergues observed friends cutting off the tops of their sneakers for better flexibility. That modification inspired the Etnies Lo-Cut One.

Since then, Etnies debuted the first ever pro model sneaker—the Natas in 1987—and founded the first skateboarding biomechanics lab for improving shoe construction. In honor of its 20th, the brand is re-releasing such classics as the Rap-High and Lo-Cut One as well as revamped versions of the Lo-Cut II, Callicut and Scam.

Bold flavors from south of the border are becoming more popular–and we're not just talking about spicy foods. As dancers, designers, filmmakers, musicians and visual artists continue to explore Mexican themes, we'll have more reasons to party with authentic Mexican flair. So take notes, grab a Dos Equis® and let the fiestas begin.

cincocitas (sēń-kō sē-tŭs)

n. 1. Sexy, passionate women who embody the spontaneous, adventurous spirit of Mexico though they may reside elsewhere. 2. Women who inspire other people to have fun. 3. Women who drink Dos Equis® beer. 4. The mamacitas of Cinco de Mayo.

cincocitasearch

These women aren't shy, so you're most likely to find them in the center of all the action. Start looking in the central bar area, on the dance floor or up on stage. If you do find a cincocita to celebrate with on Cinco de Mayo, she'll show you such a good time that you'll want to keep the party going not just all night, but all year.

cincocita seduction

If you think getting–and keeping–a cincocita's attention is as easy as opening a Dos Equis, put down your beer (just for a second) and keep reading.

1. Be Authentic. Believe you have something unique to offer her. If you don't think you're exceptionally interesting, a cincocita won't either.
2. Be Passionate. Mean what you say. The ever-confident cincocita will be completely turned off by your standard attempts at flattery.
3. Be Adventurous. Still don't dance? Get over it. A cincocita will expect you to hold your own out on the dance floor.

cincosound

Mexican music is the soundtrack for Cinco de Mayo. Although many still associate Mexican music with traditional mariachi bands, musicians from Mexico have expanded their styles far beyond those of the old world. Captivated by both native culture and outside influences, current Mexican musicians marry sounds of the past with new-world beats.

keycollective

Tijuana's leader of electronica, Nortec Collective, best represents the modern Mexican sound. Nortec Collective created a style of music called nortec, a fusion of norteño ("from the North") and techno. The new sound represents a fusion between the style and culture of electronica and traditional Mexican music.

solidspin

If you don't have plans to go out on Cinco de Mayo, bring the party home to you. Just be sure to put the right spin on it.

1. Stock Up. Pick up plenty of Dos Equis®, the authentic premium Mexican lager, and don't forget to put them on ice before your guests arrive.
2. Tune In. Make sure you're up to speed on current music. While you'll need to play some crowd pleasers, mix it up with lots of new tracks to keep guests on their toes.
3. Don't Stop. Have enough songs on hand to take you through the night. Running out of music is like running out of beer. Either way, the party's over.

cincostyle

Vibrant colors and evocative images surround Cinco de Mayo. Mexican imagery, however, has moved beyond ancient Aztec pyramid carvings of serpents, spears and gods that many still associate with Mexico. Today, artists are taking fresh, new approaches to interpreting traditional Mexican iconography.

vividvales

The style of artist Erni Vales represents the modernization of Mexican inspired imagery. Currently, Erni is using his critically acclaimed talent to design and paint a fleet of Cinco de Mayo tour busses for Dos Equis®.

Beginning as an underground graffiti artist, Erni now creates art that transcends music, video, fashion and interior design–even television. Just last spring, Erni and his work were featured on season 3 of The Apprentice on NBC.

OUR PICKS FOR THE MONTH'S BEST

Recrafted Croft
For Tomb Raider Legend, Lara Croft's mammoth curves were reshaped and whittled down. Why? "When Lara was first conceived 10 years ago, game characters were very blocky," says Croft creator Toby Gard. "We had to exaggerate all of her proportions just so you could recognize her as a woman. Now, we have more to work with, so we were able to add subtleties. Her boobs are smaller, but I still think they're pretty big." Available for PS2, Xbox, 360, PC and PSP.

Erotic Eagles
The Eagles of Death Metal drop the album Death by Sexy April 11. And what do they find sexy? Cowbell, for one. "The hard knock leads to hard rock," says singer/drummer Joshua Homme. "The cowbell equals ass-shaking." For the duo's full list of what's sexy, visit FHMUS.com/Eagles.

TIPS FROM THE GAMING GODDESS

Morgan doles out investment advice

I sunk $50 into King Kong and finished it in one day. I feel ripped off! Surely there are better games for my money out there, right?
Stuart Gentes, Yuba City, CA

Games are like movies: Most cost the same whether you're blowing a rib through your 97th Old School screening or experiencing the pain of Boat Trip for the first time. Here's a list of games you can hole up with for months on end.

GTA: San Andreas is epic with more than 80 hours of game play and three massive cities to explore. While navigating an intricate plot in search of filial vengeance, you must also look after little things, such as eating, which affects your weight. And nothing is more gangsta than being too plump to throw a punch (rest in peace, Biggie).

If you're a racing fan, both Gran Turismo 4 for PS2 and Forza Motorsport for Xbox are fine-tuned automotive sims that let armchair grease monkeys tweak and customize cars until their fingers bleed grease.

The best deal, however, is online gaming. Battlefield 2 on the PC, for example, is a game of modern warfare in which you and 63 pals can work out old grievances. With lead. And should shooting friends ever grow old, you can always run them over in a tank. Not a fan of realism? Quake 4, Unreal Tournament 2004 and Halo 2 deliver the same thrills, but in space-age packaging.

Now, here are some less-than-lengthy ones to watch out for: God of War is an excellent game that clocks in at a measly 10 hours. Lego: Star Wars can be finished in less time than it takes to watch the film prequels. And Condemned: Criminal Origins offers a mere eight hours of gritty hobo-extermination, which simply isn't enough dead hobos.

How Tourist Trophy got its bikes and tracks just right

Bodies This PS2 racer by the team behind Gran Turismo boasts more two-wheelers than a save-the-earth rally, and none of the hippie stink! "We took up to 1,000 photos of each bike in the game," says producer Takamasa Shichisawa of the more than 100 models from such companies as Buell, Honda and Ducati. "Then we measured them. If a manufacturer didn't have an older model, such as the Suzuki RG 250 Gama, we'd borrow it from a personal owner."

Sounds "We used two methods to capture the sounds of a bike," Shichisawa says. "Some we put on a lift with rollers and recorded the engine at different rpms: 1,000, 2,000, 3,000. For others we hid a mic inside the body and recorded while it moved."

Tracks The game's 35 raceways were built off of real-world blueprints and geographic data. "We also took about 20,000 photos of each one," Shichisawa says. "We rented cranes and drove them around the track with someone on top taking photos. We even rented helicopters and flew over, taking shots with the door open. I photographed a few of the tracks myself by leaning out of a helicopter with nothing but a seat belt holding me in."

MISSION: IMPOSSIBLE III

Ving Rhames shares three things you should know about the latest Mission

1) Chemistry is important

"I think the reason my character, Luther, has survived through the series is because of my friendship off-screen with Tom Cruise," says Ving Rhames. "We first met before the premiere of Pulp Fiction. I was in the bathroom taking a leak and he came up and asked me if I was in the film. I told him to watch it and tell me what he thought. After the screening, he came up and gave me a big hug. Soon after, I got the script for the first Mission. I jokingly said, 'OK, the black man dies in the first 10 pages.' To his credit, Tom made sure that didn't happen, and for action films these days, that's rare."

2) It's not all explosions

"M:I:III is a full-throttle action ride but it's also the most character-driven film in the series," Rhames says. "You get to learn about Ethan Hunt's personal life and since I'm the only actor aside from Tom Cruise who's been in all three Missions, they beefed up my role. You'll see more of the bond between Luther and Ethan, but don't worry—it's definitely not a buddy film."

3) Luther gets to play

"This time, I'm not just behind the computer," Rhames says. "Director J.J. Abrams said, 'If you have Ving Rhames, you have to use him.' So, I got the chance to handle some cool CIA equipment, like a $250,000 device that fits in my pocket. I also trained with explosives for a sequence involving computer-controlled weapons. Now Luther's a black man with a gun."

M:I:III hits theaters May 5.

Michael Douglas is a framed Secret Service agent who had an affair with the first lady. This easily could've become a comedy by casting Barbara Bush.

SILENT HILL
A woman drives through a portal to another reality covered in darkness and filled with freaky creatures. Or maybe she made a wrong turn in New Jersey.

ROAD KING

Jeff Daniels is motor-home-crazed in RV—and in real life

The anti-Travolta

"I started renting RVs and liked them so much, I bought one," Jeff Daniels says. "When I got the part in RV, I drove four days from Michigan to the set in Vancouver. I pulled up as the production staff was setting up RV driving lessons for me, Robin Williams and the other actors. They took one look at me and said, 'Cancel his lessons.' Then I hit the air brakes and let out a loud hiss."

Higher power

"One of my favorite things about driving the RV is seeing the little Honda Civics below when I'm making a wide turn," Daniels says. "You need every inch, so your bumper comes right up to theirs. Looking into the eyes of that driver looking up at this King Kong vehicle, all you see is fear. Then you cut the wheel perfectly and their life is spared. Now that's fun."

Wheel daze

"During a trip, my wife, son and I went to a truck stop," Daniels says. "We got back in the RV, I got on the highway and my son said, 'Where's Mom?' I left her behind. You're basically driving a building with lots of hiding places, so I didn't notice. I drove 18 miles to the next exit and turned around, but she had gotten in a stranger's car. Now we take a head count—even if it's only the two of us."

RV hits theaters April 28.

INSTANT WISDOM

- For his directing credit, Yauch uses his alias Nathanial Hörnblowér.
- The film chronicles the band's concert at Madison Square Garden on October 9, 2004.

ADAM YAUCH

The Beastie Boy and director of Awesome; I Fuckin' Shot That! on Bon Jovi, tight budgets and fans with pies

You made a film by editing footage from cameras you gave to 50 fans at a concert. Bon Jovi handed out cameras to fans to shoot the "Bad Medicine" video. Coincidence?
I wasn't aware of the video before the film, so I wasn't affected too heavily. I came up with the idea that the fans should shoot from beginning to end. I had been thinking about the idea for a few weeks, but we decided to do it at this particular concert only three days before the show. Honestly, I don't even think it was one of the best concerts on the tour.

How did the cameras impact your performance?
If you make a mistake, you're like, "Aw, shit. That got documented." Normally if you make a mistake, you forget about it.

Afterward, did you do something worthy with the cameras, like donate them to an orphanage?
Sort of. We returned them all and got the money back.

Are things that tight for the Beastie Boys?
It's a production technique.

What was the nastiest thing the fans filmed?
There were four trips to the bathroom but only one of them made it into the movie. Some people snuck backstage and broke locks. I don't know how they did it.

How often did watching the fans' home videos make you nauseous?
I don't get motion sick often. I've built my tolerance up with first-person shooter video games.

What's the strangest thing you've seen during a concert?
Once in Switzerland, someone hit our keyboard player, Mark, with a pie right as we walked on the stage. That means the person brought the pie into the arena, waited up front, hid the pie during both opening acts and had the aim to hit someone. That's impressive.

Awesome; I Fuckin' Shot That! is in theaters now.

DRINKING WITH TOBY

Country's biggest hat tells you how to handle yourself in a honky-tonk

Toby Keith wants to be known for his drinking songs, not his political views. "I have about 30 drinking songs, and I have only one patriotic song," he says. "Get Drunk and Be Somebody," from Keith's album White Trash With Money (out April 11), is his latest ode to bar life.

Still, sometimes a drunk, belligerent asshole has to ruin everything. Here are Toby's tips for handling yourself in a bar fight:

Recognize the enemy
"Some people drink and feel bulletproof. They decide they're going to be the guy who's gonna have his ass whupped that night. My last bar fight was three years ago. After bothering me all night, this guy came toward me, popping his knuckles like he was gonna do something. The gal who runs the place stepped in and the guy called her a 'bleached-blond, four-eyed, fat bitch.' I just laid him up. Then I grabbed the guy by the hair and his belt, stood him up, ran him about 20 yards to the door and threw him out in the alley."

Don't start trouble
"Try to avoid fighting. Give the guy the opportunity to end things two or three times, then give the proprietor the chance to fix the problem. If it happens anyway, be sure that when the cops get there and go, 'Whose fault is it?' everybody doesn't point at you."

End it quickly
"If you've exhausted your options, then pick your best spot. Don't just swing to be swinging. Look at the spot, dial in, put one foot in front of the other, keep your fist tight and swing through. Make it a one-punch deal."

Never run
"Running is never an option, unless you're in the car with your wife and kids and three guys attempt to carjack you. Then, yeah, running's an option."

TOURING

ROAD RANT!

From his tour bus, Rob Zombie laments the decline of an American cultural institution: the truck stop

I'm touring again and what bothers me is the sameness of traveling America, specifically truck stops. Twenty years ago, you looked forward to every truck stop. They would have a Bigfoot Society information booth or guns for sale or a tiger chained up in the back. Now every one has a Starbucks, a Subway and a DVD section.

Years ago, a truck stop in Detroit was far different from one in El Paso, TX. At one stop, there was a wrestling match out back. Another was covered in mechanical neon Jesus pictures. Once, I saw dead jackrabbits hanging upside down on a clothesline—hey, dead jackrabbits for sale!

Truck stops also were good for buying weapons, such as brass knuckles, machetes and collapsible metal sticks for smacking someone upside the head.

Some stops felt dangerous—there would be rednecks who wanted to kill you. Now, I just see people in line at Quiznos.

As corporations merge and take each other over, everything becomes the same. Americans used to be more willing to embrace the individual and the weird. Now, they play it safe by always going to Starbucks. Mix it up, people!

CRAB LIFE

Deadliest Catch revisits the fun-filled world of crab harvesting. One captain explains what the cameras miss

INSTANT WISDOM
- The crab pots weigh up to 2,000 pounds when full.
- Crabs often become injured while trying to get to the bait. They then act as more bait and are eaten by other crabs.

Home stench "We use herring and sardines for bait," says Eric Nyhammer (top right), captain of The Rollo. "Those fish have a lot of blood and oil in them, which attracts the crabs. The smell isn't bad in the winter, but when it gets warmer, it's nasty. The bait sits on the bottom of the boat and decomposes, getting mushy and slimy. On a long trip in warmer months, the entire boat is inundated with the sour smell of decomposing fish. I've seen rookies throw up from it."

Dead cold "On the boat it gets below zero with the wind chill," Nyhammer says. "That liquid cold cuts to the bone. If you take a break, you freeze up. For new guys, the best thing to do is slap your hands on anything you can find. Over the years, I've deadened the nerves in my hands, which is a good thing. For a fisherman, all those are there for is to tell you, 'Yeah, your hands hurt.'"

Catered meals "We don't have a designated cook, so we all take turns," Nyhammer says. "People think we eat really poorly, but there's actual cooking and we set a table. There are lots of crab sandwiches and crab fettuccini. If it's good crab, you don't get sick of it. King crab, however, I'm pretty sick of."

Themed entertainment "At the end of the season, you can sit in the harbor for 10 days waiting to be unloaded," Nyhammer says. "You do work on the boat, but then you just eat and watch movies. My favorite thing to watch is Gilligan's Island. I brought seasons one and two out with us this time."

Deadliest Catch airs Tuesdays at 9 p.m. on the Discovery Channel.

RECORD BREAKERS

Go behind the stunts on Call to Greatness—MTV's new series about five guys shattering as many pointless world records as they can

Most clothes worn at one time

"I'm the smallest guy, so I did this one," says Andreas Wigand. "I broke it with 62 shirts and 32 pants. It took me 30 minutes to get the clothes off. The bottom layers were stuck to me with sweat."

Fastest four-man keg-roll relay

"The old record was six guys going one mile in eight-plus minutes," Bell says. "We did it with four guys in under eight. We were in New Orleans and the heat was the worst part. I was sweating before I started."

Most kicks to the head in one minute

"I had two weeks to train for this," says Drew Bell. "I took yoga and kickboxing because it's a lot of cardio work to connect your foot with your head and still breathe. My sweatband also really helped."

Most spitballs taken to the head

"No one wanted to do this record, so I took one for the team," Wigand says. "Toward the end, people started forgetting about the balls and just used spit, which caught me off-guard. My face actually stung."

Most bras undone in 30 seconds

"I assumed with years of practice I could do it one-handed, but I was wrong," Bell says. "I got only three and I even pinched one of the girl's backs."

Fastest living room

"We made a living room on a truck bed and I got it up to 92 mph," Bell says. "I had to wear a five-point harness, fire suit, helmet and the neck brace NASCAR drivers use."

INSTANT WISDOM
- In its final season, The A-Team was beaten by family comedies like Who's The Boss?.
- Each episode had an estimated 39 violent acts.

5 THINGS YOU DIDN'T KNOW ABOUT... THE A-TEAM

1 NBC entertainment president Brandon Tartikoff conceived of the show one night in 1982 after watching The Road Warrior and The Dirty Dozen. He tried to combine those films with The Magnificent Seven, Mission: Impossible and the weird characters on Hill Street Blues. The result: The A-Team, the No. 1 new show of 1983.

2 With Saturday Night Live in a slump in 1979, NBC put out a call for new comics. Dwight Schultz, aka Murdock, sent in a tape of his impersonations, including Henry Kissinger. He never made SNL, but the tape was a cult hit shown at Hollywood parties. An A-Team producer saw it and decided he wanted Schultz.

3 An actor named Tim Dunigan played Face in the first episode, but was then replaced by Dirk Benedict. The most high-profile role Dunigan has had since being axed was in the short-lived Mr. Smith about a talking orangutan.

4 Thanks in large part to Mr. T's appeal, by 1984 The A-Team was the most watched TV show for kids aged 2 to 11. That year, his popularity won T his own Quaker Oats cereal of corn and oat puffs that looked like T's. This made him the first nonfictional person ever to get such an honor.

5 When the cast visited the Netherlands in 1984, 20,000 people greeted them at the airport—the same size crowd that met The Beatles there in the '60s. Thousands trailed them during their three-day stay. The mania was because a full 50 percent of the nation's 14 million people regularly watched the show.

How many hours does a home-video addict waste recutting a funny trailer for a classic film? Here's the story of the Internet's best

THE SHINING

WWW.PS260.COM/MOLLY/SHINING%20FINAL.MOV

Concept Scenes from The Shining + happy music = Shining, an upbeat tale of a burgeoning father-son relationship

Robert Ryang's happy Shining won a remixing contest for film editors and started the re-cutting trend. But his success was confusing to some. "The best responses are from people who haven't seen The Shining," Ryang says. "They don't know it's a spoof. I can pull off being the real thing."

SLEEPLESS IN SEATTLE

Concept Classic Meg Ryan/Tom Hanks romance + spooky music and effects = Meg as a psycho

"I've always thought this movie was Fatal Attraction without the bunny boiling," says Australian film editor Demis Lyall-Wilson. "If someone did what Meg Ryan does in real life, you'd call the police. I picked out the most incriminating lines and put it all together in a few hours."

BROKEBACK TO THE FUTURE

Concept Scenes from Back to the Future films + Brokeback Mountain music = a love story between Doc and Marty

The brainchild of Emerson College students Patrick De Nicola and Jonathan Ade was made for a campus comedy show. "We wondered if there was enough material for homoerotic undertones, but there's a wealth," Ade says. "There are some confused, passionate hugs in the films."

MICHAEL DOUGLAS

The acting legend on his marriage, sex addiction and working at a gas station

Your first movie in three years, The Sentinel, is about to come out, but, sorry, first things first: Do you have any idea how jealous guys are that you married Catherine Zeta-Jones?

Yeah, I've got some idea. They resent the old geezer getting in there.

How exactly did he do it?

I'm nice to her. We have a good giggle. But what may have been the closer is I used to watch couples sitting in a golf cart with a brewsky and fantasize about being one of them. So, I think my eyes rolled back in my head when [Catherine] said, "Oh, yeah, I play golf."

How much of a sense of humor do you have when, say, Leno snipes at your 25-year age difference?

Let them eat their hearts out is what I say. I mean it's not freaky. Yeah, 25 years is substantial and I get a little concerned when I talk about things that went on before Catherine was even born, but I don't care. She's my wife, I'm with her, so screw 'em! For the first time in my life, family comes first. I certainly couldn't say that for the first two-thirds of it.

Those would be your years of becoming a multi-billion-dollar-grossing, double-Oscar-winning, producing and acting tycoon. Not to mention a rumored sex addict.

That happened when I went into rehab in '92. The British tabloids, in their great wisdom, decided that rather than write another rehab story . . . well, somebody came up with "sex addiction." It got great mileage. Granted, I was not in a great marriage and there was extracurricular activity, but that story sure stuck around. I don't know how bad it is, though.

It's kind of good for the persona. But do you believe in sex addiction?

Well, I guess you can masturbate too much.

Thanks for that. In The Sentinel, you play a Secret Service agent.

Yeah, I'm kind of concerned. I started out as the president in The American President, then I went down to being the drug czar in Traffic and now I'm a lowly Secret Service agent.

'I get concerned when I talk about things that went on before Catherine was even born'

Poor Mikey. Did you do any Secret Service research?

We did a whole training program with them and the FBI. A lot of it involved shooting. Now, Kiefer Sutherland's in the movie and I knew with 24 he had that stuff in his back pocket, but guess who was by far the best shot: Eva Longoria. The police officers conferred and said, "She shot better than 90 percent of the officers out there today."

Hopefully she won't turn out to be a Fatal Attraction bunny-boiler type. Have you dated one of those?

I'm Rolodexing in my brain. . . . Yeah, there was a girl in college who was obsessed and stalked me a little bit. I threw her off a cliff. . . . Actually, I just got out of town as soon as the school year was over.

That was at the University of California, Santa Barbara, which you chose to go to over Yale.

Yeah, I was an Eastern prep-school guy but their brochure had a picture of a guy walking down the beach with two girls in two-piece bathing suits. Now, this was 1963 on the East Coast and there were no two-piece bathing suits, so I said, "I'm going out there!" It was unbelievably fantastic and too much. They asked me to leave after a year.

Then what did you do?

I went back to Connecticut where I grew up and worked at a Mobil gas station. Those were the days when you'd check the oil and clean the windows. I could not believe the number of young mothers who, when you were washing the front window, would sit behind the wheel and their legs would be open with a crotch shot. And they knew exactly what they were doing. It was an interesting insight into how some young mothers behave during the fill-up. But I did become Mobil Man of the Month—my first award.

What did your dad, Kirk, teach you about females?

Aggression. With him, women were fair game. He couldn't stop himself, like an animal getting a whiff. So I saw him be fairly primal with his approach to women. But in my mother and stepfather's partnership, sex was part of one's life, but not the thing driving it.

As, say, greed drives Wall Street's Gordon Gekko's life?

Yeah. I'm always surprised when I get one more drunk investor from Wall Street coming over and saying, "You're the 'Greed is good' guy! You're the guy who got me on the Street!" I mean, we wanted to make him colorful, but we never imagined people would interpret him as the kind of person they want to be.

That happened again with Falling Down.

Villains do the things we all wish we could do, but society restrains us from being assholes. Still, part of all of us is a killer. The same way you have to teach a dog, you have to train yourself to act socially responsible. That's why we love villains. We'd like to be bad!

But now you're a United Nations messenger of peace.

After you've reached a point where you cannot talk about your movies any more—because you'll put yourself to sleep—it's a blessing. It allows you to talk about world issues. That's my motivation right now, much more than career.

As a man who uncannily channeled the zeitgeist for years in film, what's your reading of the American male psyche today?

Gay. I mean, look around: Young guys are somewhat androgynous and use cosmetics. The lines seem to be getting much closer.

Do you approve or disapprove?

I don't care. Whatever makes everybody happy.

As a grand old man of film, do you ever get jealous of the young guys?

No! Look, I'm 61. A lot of these guys use me as an example of who they'd like to have a career like—which is flattering—but I'm getting tired of this sort of "respectfulness" they give me. When they start calling me "Mr. Douglas," I'm like, "Hey! Shut the fuck up!" FHM

GUIDE TO ACTING LIKE A MAN

THE STARS BEHIND TV'S MOST WANTED FAMILY TEACH YOU HOW TO BEHAVE

Michael Imperioli, Steve Schirripa, Vincent Curatola and Dominic Chianese may not be real-life mobsters. But as veteran actors, they've experienced enough in their lifetimes to know how a gentleman should behave. FHM broke bread with the four Sopranos stars to get their advice on how real men take care of business.

What's the best way to settle a dispute with a gentleman who's crossed you?

MI Sue them. It's better than getting yourself arrested by punching him in the head or something.

VC But once you initiate a legal remedy, you have to keep at it. I would spend $50,000 to collect payment. That's not a joke. If a lawyer tells me, "Vince, you're looking for $10,000, but it's going to cost $50,000 and take two years," I'd do it.

SS Absolutely. I did an independent film when I was in Las Vegas and they didn't want to pay me. My agent at the time said, "Oh, just let it go." I said, "I'm not going to fucking let that go!" And I kept badgering the producer's office in L.A. until I said, "I am now in Los Angeles. I will come up to the office." I didn't say, "I'll come up and break your head." I just said, "I am in Los Angeles," And, you know, I got my money.

VC I did that once. Someone owed me $32,000. I called about it and he said, "I don't want to talk about it right now." I said, "You don't wanna talk about it now? We'll talk about it tonight. I'll stop over. You make time." Then an hour and a half later, the police called. He had gone and signed a complaint. You have to be careful how you say things.

What's the worst curse you can use when talking to another man?

DC When my father would vent, he used to curse beautiful arias in Italian. But I never cursed, even as a kid. My Aunt Rose watches The Sopranos and she turns the volume off when I come on. She's said to me, "I'd never heard you curse before!"

MI I've been really into "douchebag" lately. It kind of rolls off the tongue.

VC You know what I use a lot? "Go back to hell." Everything else is overdone. I was with my wife in a restaurant and some millionaire wannabe pushed her out of the way to get to the maitre d'. So I walked up to him and said, "You see this woman over here you pushed?" He said, "Oh yeah, well I know. . . ." I said, "I don't care what you know. I really will change your whole life, so apologize to her and go back to hell because I think that's where the fuck you came from."

We assume he followed your directions?

VC He did because I maintained eye contact. I don't blink. When you show someone that you could be psychotic in a split second, it has a way of pushing them back even if they're twice your size.

How do you deal with a psycho?

MI I had a really bizarre experience in the lobby of an L.A. hotel at, like, 2 a.m. once. A woman took off her dress and she had no clothes on underneath. She grabbed me and was saying that she knew I was Jesus Christ. She said she wanted to have sex with me. I was with some guys and they kind of hustled me out of there.

DC That's when you run to your room and lock the door. Unless she was very, very beautiful. Then open the door a little bit.

How does one give an acquaintance a proper nickname?

DC They called me Dickie, which came from Dominic. They already had a lot of Nicks around, so they decided since my name started with a D to make it Dickie.

MI There was a kid on my block who people used to call "Shit." That was a bad one.

SS I knew a guy named Adrian who had a big black birthmark by his eye. They called him "Adrian Shit Eye." Then there was a guy "Jalopy" in my neighborhood. They called him that because he was such a fucking wreck. Another guy, Charlie, got beat up with a baseball bat. They called him "Dent Head." He still has the name to this day.

What are true male friends required to do for one another?

DC It's very important to be there if someone needs money. In the past, there have been three or four friends who have really helped me with money.

SS A really good friend is a guy who I know, no matter what time of day or night, if I'm in trouble, I can pick up the phone and say, "Vince, I'm in trouble." Like, I know these guys will be there. And they know I'll be there.

VC Absolutely.

SS A good example is when Vince's dad passed away while we were all together in L.A. for an awards show.

DC I got a call from Michael, who said, "Vinnie's father just passed away. We're all gonna meet." It was like a real family.

VC All of the cast filtered into my room one by one.

SS We had been out all night drinking. Then here comes Uncle Junior. Here comes Paulie Walnuts.

VC It was surreal. I'll never forget it. Can you imagine hearing that unexpected news and then having everybody with me? Priceless.

What should a man look for in a future wife?

SS When I was dating my wife, she was a cocktail waitress. One day, she came home and told me that this customer was breaking her balls. She finally told this woman, "Why don't you go and fuck yourself?" That was the day I said, "This is my girl." This is the kind of girl who's not afraid to speak her mind, who will have my back.

DC I've been married a few times. What I've learned is that you have to respect yourself and be completely self-confident first before you go into marriage. The marriages before my current one were all done out of something less than that. I was needy. I needed to be married. I thought, "Marriage is going to save my life." And it doesn't. You have to be happy with yourself before you go into marriage.

When you're out in a club, do real men ever dance?

MI If they can. Most of the time the reason a guy won't dance is because he either sucks at it or he's uncomfortable with himself.

SS Guys who are good dancers get laid all over the place. But I'll tell you, it'll work in reverse too. If you're making headway with a girl and then you go out on the dance floor and she doesn't like the way you dance, you will blow it. She might have been thinking about taking you home, but that was the end of it when she saw you dance.

How does one secure the best table in a restaurant?

SS I don't care if you're a cab driver, a plumber or a celebrity, throw some money around and you'll get treated like a king. It doesn't even have to be all that much money.

VC Twenty dollars.

MI Put the money in the palm of your hand, then go up to the maitre d' or the host and say, "I'm here with my wife, and we'd like a quiet, romantic table."

SS On the way out, introduce yourself to the general manager. Give him $20, get his card and say, "Can I call you? We enjoyed dinner. We want to come back."

MI When you call, he hooks you up. You get a nice table.

SS If you have a reservation at a hot restaurant at 9 o'clock and they don't really know you, you're going to wait at the bar for an hour like a schmuck and spend $50 on drinks. And she's going to think you're an asshole if you don't come up with some dough in a hurry.

How do you make it up to your woman if you've wronged her in an argument?

DC Count to ~~10~~, lock yourself in the bathroom for a minute, then realize you're talking about feelings. Apologize if you've raised your voice.

SS Honestly, when you're wrong, you have to admit it. That's not always easy.

MI The sooner you admit it, the better.

DC That took me about 55 years to learn.

VC I start talking baby talk, and it cracks her up. In those situations, you have to break the tension somehow and put the argument away. You've got to be a moron to go to war with someone you sleep with every night.

When dating fails, what's the best way to pick up a stripper?

MI I don't recommend strip clubs.

SS Let me tell you about strippers, OK? And I'm being dead serious about this: The strippers will take your fucking kid's college fund. They will take your last dollar. There's no such thing as a stripper with a heart of gold.

VC They're like pirates.

SS I'm not saying I'm a hooker fan, but with hookers at least it's a clear business transaction. I've been in Vegas a long time and known a lot of both over the years. At least you'll get what you pay for with a hooker. FHM

Homecoming Queen

Free Ride's Erin Cahill sexes up small-town America

Getting angry gets you nowhere—just ask Saddam Hussein. That's why it was refreshing to watch Erin Cahill resist throwing a Hollywood hissy fit over being hit with a $40 parking ticket after her FHM interview at a Hollywood coffee shop. Not that her calm demeanor would surprise anyone who knows her—the homecoming and prom queen from Stafford, VA, is as down-to-earth as they come.

"Growing up, I didn't hang out with only the popular group," says the 26-year-old. "I hung out with everybody. I was never a cheerleader—and I was by no means the prettiest girl in school, either."

The latter part of that statement is hard to believe, but Erin's background does make her ideal for the role of small-town, bank-telling sweetheart Amber Danwood on Fox's new comedy Free Ride. It's a step up from her performances as Jen, the pink Power Ranger in the storied franchise's Time Force series.

"My Free Ride character is the girl next door," Erin says. "And that's who I am. I love going home. L.A. is ass-backward. At home, I can be a total smart-ass, but I'm also like a sister to all my friends."

If only everyone's sister were as hot. And insisted on paying their own fines.

Prove that you're still down-home.
I had my first bow and arrow when I was 5 years old; now I shoot rifles and handguns. A .45 is my favorite. At home, I still go to the shooting range with my dad, but I would never shoot a living thing. When I was really young, my dad killed this deer, but he had no place to hang it when he brought it home. So he hung its gutted carcass from my swing set. I freaked out. I'm a vegetarian now and I think that had something to do with it. Moral of the story, kids—if you want a new swing set, have your dad dress a carcass on it.

What's it like packing heat?
I get a major adrenaline rush from shooting a gun. There's nothing like it. It's like a video game, only real—the bullets actually hit something.

What's the nastiest thing you've eaten in the backwoods?

I've tried moonshine. It's an awful concoction that should never go into the human body. It tastes like pure rubbing alcohol. It was the most terrible thing I've ever put in my mouth. Growing up, though, it was mostly cheap Boone's Farm wines.

Being a country girl, you must have enjoyed skinny-dipping.

A bunch of my girlfriends and I went to a friend's pool, and we decided it would be fun to take off all our clothes. It was really innocent, but at the time we thought it was crazy.

Do you spend more time naked these days?

I walk around the house naked all the time. Who doesn't? You've got to be naked sometimes. I don't have wine and cheese parties naked, but if I get out of the shower and I've got something to do around the house, I'll do it naked. It's more comfortable.

"You've got to be naked sometimes"

What was it like being a Power Ranger?

Fun. Any day in which you can do some kung-fu fighting, save the world and go out for pizza, it's a good job.

Have you worn your Power Ranger outfit in the bedroom?

No, but I've been asked that more than once. Those suits are under lock and key. We only ever got to hold the helmets for photo shoots. They are literally worth thousands of dollars each.

What do you consider your best asset?

I've had numerous, flattering comments about my backside, from people I've known to complete strangers. I get, "Nice ass," or, "Don't ever lose that," and everything else you can imagine a guy saying. A girl came up to me once and told me that my butt was perfect. I don't know if I agree with that. It is nice, though.

For your FHM debut, you chose to wear lingerie. Why is it so awesome?

On nights when I'm feeling particularly feisty, I like wearing lingerie. For some women, it makes them feel demure and sweet, and that can be fun in its own way. For me, though, I feel sexy in lingerie—a little bit naughty and wild. I toss my hair around. It's exhilarating.

DANGEROUS, FAST&

BY ROB EDELSTEIN
PHOTOGRAPHY BY PATRIK GIARDINO

"Drag racing is kind of like sex," says 13-time Funny Car champ John Force. "You gotta do it for only five seconds."

So true. While NASCAR races drag on for three goddamn hours, everything at the National Hot Rod Association's Top Fuel dragster, Funny Car and Pro Stock races is much faster. Not to mention more powerful. When two Top Fuel dragsters burst off the line, the boom hits 2.3 on the Richter scale. The drivers get thrown back in their seats with a force of four G's—the same as in the space shuttle. When the quarter-mile dash ends about 4.7 seconds later, the parachutes stop the cars with a force seven times that of gravity. In the past, that jolt has proved strong enough to cause retinas to detach, as a driver's body slows down but his eyeballs keep going.

And that's when things go right. When crashes occur, everything gets apocalyptic. "In one crash, I was airborne, upside down, backward and on fire," says Top Fuel champ Tony Schumacher. Awesome!

On the following pages you'll learn what other fun the top three series in the NHRA have to offer.

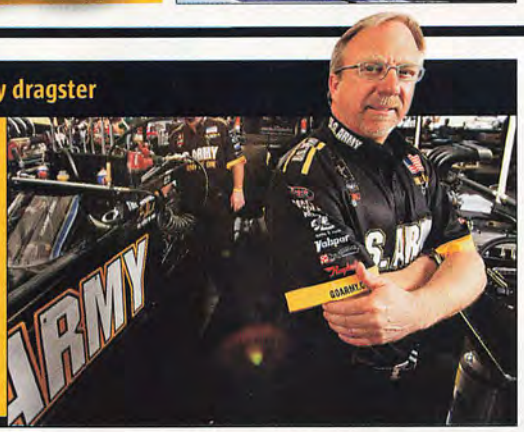
THE CREW CHIEF Alan Johnson masterminds the U.S. Army dragster

How much ass does a Top Fuel engine kick? NASCAR runs about 800 horsepower; we make 8,000. So put 10 of their engines in here. There's no way for someone who's never experienced it to just get into the car and drive. They couldn't keep the throttle down. They'd hit it, and their brain would say, 'What are you, nuts?' What's the deal with the car's fuel, nitromethane? It's nasty stuff. You can put a drop on the counter and put a match to it, and it won't light. But if you hit it with a hammer, it'll blow a hole in the counter. You could say it's somewhat volatile.



CAR COSTS

The U.S. Army dragster ate up $4.4 million last year. Here are some of the biggest costs:

Tires

$47,461

Fuel

$55,886

Engine parts

$812,781

Cost per sec. of racing

$6,398

'HOW DOES IT HIT 300 MPH?'

Such a big engine, such tiny front wheels

Engine This behemoth's 8,000 ponies make it 40 times more powerful than a normal car. Plus, the engine has been cleverly mounted in the back of the dragster, which keeps bothersome fires behind the driver.

Fuel Instead of gasoline, dragsters guzzle nitromethane—a highly combustible mixture of nitric acid and propane. And while normal cars may get 15 or 20 miles per gallon, a dragster will gulp down 12 gallons over the course of one race. And each gallon costs about 30 bucks.

Tires The back ones are huge for traction. The front ones are puny and vaguely pathetic-looking because their goal is to steer while hobbling the car with as little drag as possible.

Brakes To stop a car this vicious requires the same type of carbon-fiber brakes as used in a 747. Unlike the brakes in a normal car, these perform better as they get hotter.

The wing That floating spoiler on the back of a dragster is more than billboard space for a sponsor. It helps create somewhere between 4,000 and 8,000 pounds of downforce, which keeps the car from taking flight.

THE MESS

He'll take you away from your girl and into the gutter.

When you're with a girl, he's the last guy you want to see. Some of his favorite game-killing pastimes include fart lighting, throwing lawn furniture into the pool, and bringing up the time you spent $300 at a second-tier strip club. While these are perfectly acceptable "guy" activities, to a girl, they can make you come off as a buffoon. The Axe Dry wearer keeps his cool and picks the right place and time to engage The Mess and his many misadventures. Sure, he's an old friend. But he's also a loose cannon pointing right at your game.

THE DRIVER

John Force has walked off with the Funny Car championship a record 13 times

You get these cars going around 330 mph. What does that kind of speed feel like?

When you do it the first time, it's terrifying. It's like, "What the hell? Why am I doing this?" But it's a rush. You hang on for all you're worth.

How does your body respond when you first bolt from the line?

She leaves and it's like a blur. It's almost like you can't see during the initial hit, because you're being thrown back. Sometimes the front end will hike up in the air, and sometimes it'll move to the left. You've got to feather the throttle or pull the brake handle to keep her straight down that alley. And listen to the motor all the time. If you hear something, you have to make a decision about whether to shut it off. If you don't shut it off, you can win. But if you're wrong, you go to the burn center or maybe kill yourself. And this all happens in five seconds.

Ever been at a red light and looked over to see a guy gunning his engine, looking to race you?

No. But I train on a portable [starting light] to work on my reaction time. I got to the point where I was doing it so much, when I'd pull up to a traffic light and the left turn arrow came on, I'd drive right through the light. My foot would go out of reaction.

You're a drag-racing legend. What's the weirdest place a fan has asked you to sign something?

I had a guy ask me to sign his pig once.

'MAKE IT FUNNY!'

Why are these cars so uproarious?

Body The entire body lifts up for easy entry, and an escape hatch in the roof helps with quick departures. These cars initially looked normal, then engineers stretched their chassis to fit bigger engines. People said the new car looked "funny." That name stuck.

Parachutes The spring-loaded chutes slam the driver back with more force than when he takes off. The car slows down 100 mph in one second.

Engine The nitro-guzzling engine sits in front of the driver, so it's covered with a Kevlar blanket. That helps keep down the flying shrapnel in the event of an explosion.

WHAT CAN GO WRONG?

Reigning Funny Car champ Gary Scelzi gives you an idea

"When these cars are wide open, 100 gallons of fuel per minute are being pumped into the engine. If for any reason it breaks an intake valve when the piston fires, you have a catastrophic explosion that's like seven sticks of dynamite. Along with the car body being blown to pieces, you have shrapnel and you have fire. Plus, you're traveling at more than 300 mph, so time isn't on your side to get focused, get the parachutes out and try to keep from bouncing off the walls. A lot can happen in 4.7 seconds."

OLD-FASHIONED MUSCLE

Similar to a NASCAR ride, except faster. And with doors!

Gas Unlike Top Fuel and Funny Car, Pro Stock uses regular gasoline. Well, maybe not regular: Their fuel is leaded and 118 octane. Even the Super grade from gas stations is only around 92 octane.

Engine At 1,350 horses, this engine is seven times more powerful than one in a normal car. But when it comes to mixing the gas with air, these cars don't even have fuel injection. Instead they keep it old school, relying on two carburetors.

Hood scoop The freaky growth on the hood is like a supercharger—it feeds air directly into the twin carburetors to amp up horsepower. When the NHRA stops in an elevated city such as Denver, Pro Stockers whip out even bigger scoops to compensate for the thin air, but speeds are still lower at high altitude.

Doors Yeah, these cars actually have them. A few even have real headlights!

Transmission Unlike in the other two major series, drivers have to work the clutch in Pro Stock. That's five gear changes in four seconds. After that, it's about two or three seconds of fast.

THE OWNER Don Schumacher fields nine teams—two of them Pro Stock

What's the cost of owning a Pro Stock team?
It's very expensive to run any team. A Pro Stock team costs about $1.6 million a year. That's versus $4.4 million for a Top Fuel dragster.

What's the craziest way a driver has ever tried to convince you to hire him?
Probably doing a table dance for my wife. And he got hired! It was [current Funny Car champ] Gary Scelzi. Gary fell into a period where people felt he wasn't capable of racing. But we started talking about bringing out another team with him as the driver. When he did the table dance, it was just Gary's way of being Gary.

You used to be a champion driver. When did you last take one of these cars out for a spin?
I warmed up a Funny Car a few years ago. Just warming the car up, it wasn't hard for that needle to get back in my arm. But I have to think about my family. Still, there's no doubt that if I set my mind to it, I could win the world championship. FHM

The Real World: Key West's hottest housemate has been unleashed

The most significant threats to a Real World housemate's peace of mind have, until now, been vodka-soaked meltdowns and errant Jacuzzi scum. That is until the 17th season of MTV's flagship series headed to Key West, FL, last year—and straight into hurricanes Rita and Wilma.

"To see a hurricane moving at full speed, with 130 mph winds, was some scary shit," says Svetlana Shusterman, the new season's hottest resident and designated fit-thrower. The 20-year-old beauty is not new to challenges, though: She was smuggled stateside at the age of 4 from her native Ukraine and is now a biology major at Philadelphia's Temple University. Bigger obstacles, though, face the show's producers in their quest to keep Svetlana covered for TV.

"Most of the time, I wear something revealing," Svetlana says. "My mentality is, it's better to do it now than when I'm 40 years old and look weird. I have big boobs, and it's good to show them off."

Fans writing on The Real World blogs have you pegged as "the crazy Russian chick." You're Ukrainian, but are you crazy?
I'm absolutely out of my mind. I'm far from normal in everything I do—from going to the bathroom to just existing. I'm a big weirdo, and I love that. I'm that girl who is always in a good mood. I'll run around naked if I have to, or if I want to. If you double-dare me, I have to do it. That's something my roommates on the show worked out pretty quickly.

Give us an example.
My life is like a game of truth or dare. If people are bored, they'll ask me, "Hey, Svet, do you want to eat boiled eggs until you puke?" and I'll be like, "Why not?"

Do you bare your ample bosom on the show?
I would not want my boyfriend showing his jewels to some chick, so I wasn't going to show my titties to my roommates. I think they might have seen them, though. I'm always naked—I'm always naked and want other people to be naked with me. I did walk around my bedroom nude on the show, but not in other areas of the house. There's no good excuse for walking into a kitchen naked.

Are there any good punch-ups in the series?
There aren't any physical fights, because I wasn't allowed. There were certainly moments when I wanted to rip someone's head off. If you really piss me off, I don't take the intelligent route—I'd rather beat the shit out of you. I couldn't do that, though, because I signed a contract with MTV before filming started. There were times when I was like, "If only I could choke you for 10 minutes, I'd feel so much better." But, of course, I couldn't do that.

Have you kicked a girl's ass away from the MTV cameras?

Yes. It was 4 a.m. in Montreal on the week of New Year's Eve. It was freezing cold, and I was waiting for a cab outside. One finally came and, as I was holding the door, three girls ran into the cab and stole it before my friends and I could get in. I started banging on the window—here's where it becomes the other chick's fault—and she wound down the window. Big mistake. My fists took over her face. I hit her with everything I had before the cab sped away. My knuckles were left swollen and bloody with teeth marks. I think she got it pretty good, which is what she deserved.

Finally, your 34DD breasts. Are they a help or a hindrance?

Oh, they're great. I love to play with my boobs.

That's understandable.

What could be better than playing with boobs? I'm so blessed that I have 34DDs because I'm never bored. I don't know what it's like to play with balls, but I'd play with them if I had them. The same goes with boobs. How could you not want to touch these boobs? They're so much fun. Seriously, I love my chest more than guys do. When my guy is touching my boobs, I'm like, "Hey, that's not fair. I want to touch them too." I get jealous. FHM

Kings of the Court

Celebrating their 80th anniversary, the Harlem Globetrotters recall the events that made them icons

The magic begins

In 1926, Chicago entrepreneur Abe Saperstein formed the Savoy Big Five, a basketball team named after a local ballroom. He soon changed the name to the Harlem Globetrotters—despite the fact that none of them were actually from Harlem.

George "Meadowlark" Lemon Globetrotter 1955-1979 When I was 11, I saw the Harlem Globetrotters on a newsreel at the local cinema. Coming from the South, they were the first black heroes I'd ever seen. All the cowboys were white. Superman was white. Batman was white. I left the theater early to go home and learn to play basketball. I made a basket out of a coat hanger and an onion sack, nailed it to a tree and used a Carnation milk can as a basketball.

Mannie Jackson Globetrotter 1961-1964, CEO 1993-present Originally, the Globetrotters were a barnstorming team. Barnstorming was the only option for talented African-American players, so the Globetrotters would travel all over the U.S. to play anybody who would pay them. Fifty bucks—they'd stop and play.

Otis "Mr. OK" Key Globetrotter 1998-present Early on, the Globetrotters were winning one game 112-2. They needed a way to keep people from leaving once they started blowing teams out. When the score got out of hand, you had a guy like "Goose" Tatum who could take over with his sense of humor. He came from a baseball team, the Indianapolis Clowns, which would do that thing with a baseball that we now do with a basketball in our Magic Circle. People would stick around to see that.

Globetrotter Mannie Jackson bought the team in 1993

Fred "Curly" Neal Globetrotter 1963-1985 Back then, the team only had five or six players, so Abe—who was 5-foot-4—would play if someone needed to rest.

Paul "Showtime" Gaffney Globetrotter 1993-present Once, the team was playing in a barn that had a potbelly stove near the court. A player leaned against it and his shirt caught on fire. He was running across the floor, saying, "My shirt's on fire! My shirt's on fire!" And the crowd started laughing. It stopped the game for a bit, and that gave the guys a rest—which was good because they really didn't want Abe to come in and play. And that's how the comedy started: to give the guys a rest.

Neal That's where Marques Haynes came in with the dribbling routine. The other guys would read newspapers on the floor because they knew nobody could take the ball away from Marques.

Lemon He was like a concert pianist. He created that style of dribbling—crawling and sliding across the floor. There's no one who's been able to do it like Marques before or since.

Marques Haynes Globetrotter 1946-1953 & 1972-1979 As kids, we used to dribble tennis balls on railroad tracks. We'd have contests to see how far we could go because you really have to bounce it right. When I started incorporating my ball-handling with the Globetrotters, it amazed them. We didn't have the shot clock, so dribbling was used to stall. My dribbling, the slick passing, the now-you-see-it, now-you-don't routines—those hadn't been done before. Coaches didn't allow flashy stuff in school, so all this stuff was done during intramural games when the coaches weren't around.

John Chaney Coach of Temple University, Globetrotter 1955 It used to be that if the coach saw you take the ball around the back, he'd sit you down: "My goodness! We don't want to see you put the ball behind there. You're trying to make a fool out of somebody!" The Globetrotters had to fight through that thinking.

A game against the Minneapolis Lakers drew a crowd of 17,000

Globetrotters Beat Minneapolis Lakers, 61-59, as Gun Sounds . . .

The Globetrotters' win against the Lakers helped lead to the integration of the NBA

A player's shirt once caught on fire. The crowd started laughing

Jackson In the South, they played before two audiences, a black one and a white one. There were times when players would play in front of 12,000 people, but then they'd walk across the street and they weren't allowed to buy a sandwich.

Charles "Tex" Harrison Globetrotter 1954-1972, team coach 1979-present Once we were in the deep South, where we normally couldn't get into hotels. Someone had taught a chimpanzee to bowl, and it was putting on exhibitions in bowling alleys. We couldn't get into any hotel, but this chimp had the biggest suite in town. It made you think.

Jackson In the '40s, the Globetrotters were the largest drawing team in the world. But white folks weren't allowed to take black folks seriously, so nobody realized how good the Globetrotters really were. Then in 1948, they scheduled a game with the quote-unquote "league champion"—the Minneapolis Lakers of what would become the NBA. To put it in perspective, it would be like a bunch of YMCA guys challenging Michael Jordan and the Bulls of the '90s.

Haynes Seventeen thousand people showed up to see us play. The vast majority thought the Lakers would win—it was just a matter of by how much. The game went back and forth and fortunately we were the ones who had the ball with a few seconds left. We made a last-second shot to beat them by two points. There's a good probability that if the Lakers had had the ball, they would have won.

Kevin "Special K" Daley Globetrotter 2004-present It took that game for people to see that white and black players could play on the same court without it being an issue. We are responsible for integrating the NBA because of that game. The first African-American player signed in the NBA was a Globetrotter—Nat "Sweetwater" Clifton.

Becoming Legends

World tours, half-court hook shots and such star athletes as Wilt Chamberlain and Jesse Owens: The Globetrotters built a legacy that survives to this day

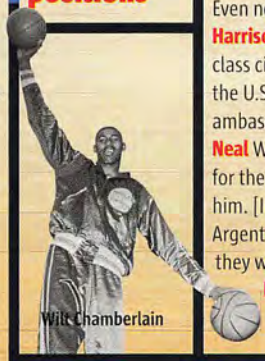
Argentineans once called a ceasefire to their civil war when the Trotters visited

Jackson Cab Calloway, Satchel Paige, Jesse Owens: They all traveled with the team at some point. We had so much segregation in those days, there were only a few places great artists could go. Cab Calloway was half-time entertainment. Satchel would play basketball. Jesse Owens would be the PA announcer. When Jesse finished running, he couldn't make money like track stars do today. He had to find work and this was the highest-paying job available. He also liked that he had stayed in sports.

Neal My senior year in college, I was a small-college All-American . . . I could play ball. I was scouted by five professional teams—the Detroit Pistons, the New York Knickerbockers, the Atlanta Hawks, the Baltimore Bullets and the Globetrotters. But you had to pay your own way to camp. The Globetrotters sent me a plane ticket to come to Chicago to try out.

Lemon Wilt Chamberlain played with us for one year before he went to the NBA. And he said he liked playing with us much better, so he'd come play with us in the summer. Chamberlain was so good he played all five positions. And he was fast. When he hit half court, he'd be at full speed, rolling like a big wheel and nobody would want to get in his way. You'll see a lot of people now who will take a flop. But back in those days you didn't flop, because if you flopped with Chamberlain, his first step would be on your ankle, the next step would be on your knee and the next step would be on your chest or your head. You flopped only one time.

'Wilt was so good he played all five positions'



Wilt Chamberlain

Neal That first year, Wilt made more money with the Globetrotters than the NBA was willing to pay him.

Lemon My half-court hook shot started because I couldn't stay in the pivot and shoot over guys as big as Chamberlain. I was 70 percent with the half-court hook. Even now, I can do 60 percent.

Harrison Even though we were second-class citizens at home, when we left the U.S., we put that aside and became ambassadors of goodwill.

Neal We played a game in the Vatican just for the pope. Ten guys playing a game—for him. [In 1956] they stopped a civil war in Argentina so the team could play. Then they went back to fighting when we left.

Harrison When we visited communist countries, the governments didn't want us fraternizing with the locals. We were in Bucharest, Romania, in the '50s, and Meadowlark and I went to a movie. The people recognized us, so when the movie ended, they wanted to have a conversation. Men came up behind us with machine guns, put them up to our backs and told us to move on and stop talking to locals. That was a scary moment.

Neal Over the years we created so many skits. "Geese" Ausbie would knock a cup of water out of my hands and it would fall on the fans. Then we'd come out with a bucket of water to get the referee. Then we'd chase some fans with another bucket. They'd think they were about to get wet, but it would be full of confetti. Fans began pulling out raincoats and umbrellas—they wanted to be part of the show.

Ferguson Jenkins Hall of Fame pitcher, Globetrotter 1967-1969 I once saw Curly kick in two balls from half court. The crowd went absolutely berserk. A month later, Meadowlark hooked two balls in from half court—while sitting in the audience.

Lemon We'd beat up the local teams in their own town, so they'd want to fight us.

Neal One time, Meadowlark got in a fight in Ohio. Someone jumped on his back in the first half, and they ended up throwing blows. The referee ejected Meadowlark, but he came back in the second half. The referee said, "You can't come in this game." But the fans wanted to see Meadowlark. He said, "You can't put me out. Just watch me come back in."

Lemon We kept the violence down by bringing along a team like the Generals.

Players on local teams would start fights with Meadowlark

Louis "Red" Klotz Washington Generals player and coach 1952-1989 I was with a team called the Philadelphia Stars, which beat the Globetrotters. We won because I pulled a Marques Haynes at the end and froze the ball. Abe told me he needed some tough, consistent opposition and wanted me to form my own team. I named them after President Eisenhower—the Washington Generals. People ask me all the time, "Do you let the Trotters win?" Not one time in all my years as a player or coach have I ever let the Trotters win.

Lemon The Generals had top-notch talent that could have beaten a lot of professional teams. Then there was one game in 1971, where some of us laid down on the job. It just so happened that that one night, the Generals were hot.

Neal We had a 2,500-game winning streak going on, but that night, the Generals weren't missing anything. In the last two minutes, we were 10 points down and so involved with the comedy that we forgot about the score. We brought the game to within a point, but they won. Families were dejected and kids started crying.

TEN THINGS YOU DON'T KNOW ABOUT THE TROTTERS

From the one-armed player to Meadowlark Lemon Aid

1 Despite their name, the team didn't play a game in Harlem, NY, until 1968—42 years after their creation.

2 In 1942, they signed Bob Karstens, their first white player, who helped create the "Magic Circle" routines.

3 Lynette Woodard became the first female Trotter in 1985, after she'd won an Olympic gold medal in '84.

4 In 1945, Globetrotter Boid Buie averaged 18 points per game—despite having only one arm.

5 Marques Haynes first lit the Trotters up for 26 points in a game. They offered him a job later in the showers.

6 Current Globetrotter Michael Wilson holds the record for world's highest slam dunk: 12 feet.

7 The Globetrotters signed two players for life: Bill Cosby and Magic Johnson. Both make $1 per year.

8 Curly Neal began shaving his head when he was 12 years old. Doing it got him expelled from school.

9 Meadowlark Lemon is working on a line of energy drinks, including the flavor Meadowlark's Lemon Aid.

10 In cartoons, Meadowlark was voiced by Scatman Crothers, the guy who also voiced Hong Kong Phooey.

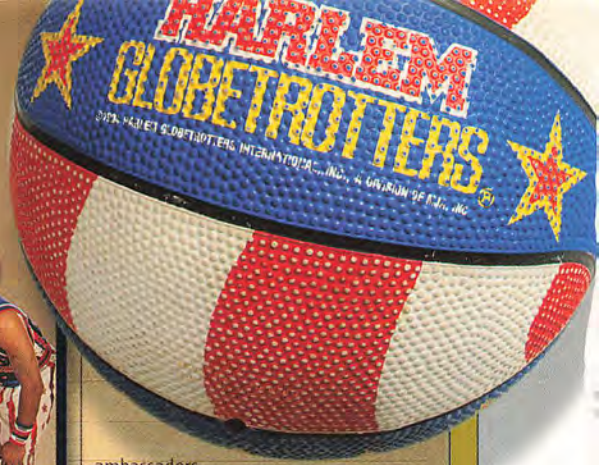
Jackson with the current Trotters

By 1993, the team had gone bankrupt



Klotz When I hit the game-winner, the audience booed. I got my guys into the dressing room quickly and, since we didn't have champagne, they poured orange soda on me. I was happy we beat them, but it was like killing Santa Claus.

Lemon When we went to Hollywood, all the stars would bring their kids. John Wayne, Frank Sinatra, Dean Martin—they'd come into the dressing room at halftime. We'd see the Kennedys all over the world. There was no telling where they'd show up.

Neal Once we were popular, it was hard for us to go out. I would sometimes wear an Afro wig just to have some peace. We had three cartoons—but we didn't do the voices on them. We couldn't. We were on the road playing 300 games a year. I wish we had done the voices, though, because they would have paid us. But we didn't get paid at all, I'm sorry to say.

Jackson After Abe passed away, the team moved to some entrepreneurs who saw it as an entertainment vehicle. The cartoons from the '70s popularized the team. The problem is, when you reduce someone to a cartoon, it appeals to the generation of the moment, but it's hard to move on from that. The owners didn't know what to do. When I bought the team in 1993, they were in bankruptcy, with bad players, bad plays and bad uniforms.

Harrison We had gotten strictly show conscious and it had become slapstick buffoonery. I thought we would go out of business. I'm sure there were some players who showed up to games with a little alcohol on their breath. Mannie wanted to recruit top athletes, play the best basketball possible and entertain along with that. I didn't think it was achievable, but he proved me wrong.

Jackson If we play 300 games a year, about a third are outright competitive games and the rest are exhibition games where we do a show. Every now and then we say we're the best team in the world, and play anybody who wants to play us. We offered to play the Argentine national team—the Olympic champions that beat our Dream Team in 2004—for $1 million. Then they told us they wanted the money mailed to Argentina before we played. We had to cancel and say, "No way, we're not sending the money in advance. That's crazy."

A third of the Globetrotters' current games are actually competitive

'We offered to play the '04 Olympic champs for $1 million'

Klotz This team has pioneered basketball all around the world. What you see in the NBA with these great ballplayers from Europe and all over—we started that. We taught them how to play. The countries didn't even have baskets when we first started. We had to carry our own baskets and our own floor with us. And we represented America better than any other ambassadors.

We went behind the iron curtain and entertained people before any other Americans could get into those places.

Daley Every single day, somebody will tell me, "When I was a kid, my dad took me to see the Globetrotters and I thought it was the greatest thing. And now, I'm bringing my kid. Thank you for keeping it going."

Neal I probably could have made much more money if I'd gone to the NBA, but it wasn't about money. It was about making people happy and bringing nations together. I believe if you keep giving, you receive your benefits in the end.

Lemon A few years ago, Shaq asked for my autograph. He said, "You gave me an autograph when I was a kid, but I lost it. Will you please give me another?" I signed a picture and a basketball. A few months later, he was on the news looking at his trophies, and he had my ball among his trophies. That was a big compliment.

Jackson I still remember a game that we lost. I didn't understand what it meant for the Globetrotters to lose, and Abe Saperstein scolded me. He said, "Get that smirk off your face and quit talking. You lost. No one thinks it's funny when the Globetrotters lose. You didn't just disappoint the 15,000 people here, you've disappointed at least 20 million people around the world. A young whippersnapper like you should take that seriously." Now when I put together teams, I try hard to find guys who are ballplayers, entertainers and good people. And I've never forgotten what Abe said. The players we have now get it too. The ones who don't . . . we don't keep them very long. FHM

THIS LOIS LANE IS PUTTING SMALLVILLE ON THE MAP

BY MATTHEW GRAHAM
PHOTOGRAPHY BY
PERRY HAGOPIAN

As shoes go, only the ones that anchor Shaq's favorite clown costume are larger to fill than those left by Hollywood's Lois Lanes. So Erica Durance knew what she was facing when she took the role of the Man of Steel's love-to-be on The WB's Smallville.

"I was terrified at first to be playing Lois Lane," says the 27-year-old native of Three Hills, Alberta, a farm town about 60 miles northeast of Calgary. "Luckily, I didn't have time to think about it. I got the part on a Friday and started shooting on Monday morning. The Lois I'm playing is a lot younger than Teri Hatcher's Lois or Margot Kidder's Lois, though, which gives me more freedom."

Erica's Lois is heading down the home stretch of her second season on the five-year-old series. Thanks to story lines that have seen her get felt up by Aquaman and go undercover as a stripper, hers is the sexiest take on the character to date. Erica is just fine with that.

"It would be nice if fans thought I was the sexiest Lois Lane," she says. "Usually they comment on my Lois's humor and that she's ballsy. They like her sass, and that she isn't falling head over heels for Clark. Lois Lane is sexy, sassy and smart. What woman doesn't want to be that?"

And looking at Erica's FHM debut, what man wouldn't want to be banished from Krypton's cruel, red sun?

You grew up on a turkey farm. What was that like?

Well, I have a real hatred for birds. I'm like Jodie Foster in The Silence of the Lambs, only my nightmares are about turkeys. It smelled like crap the whole time, but I got used to it. I had a simple, normal childhood working on the farm, and also working as a janitor with my family. Shoveling manure and cleaning up pee humbles you. I'll never forget it.

Wait. You were a janitor?

It was actually fun. What, who am I kidding? No it wasn't. My older brother and sister and my parents cleaned three buildings in town. I did the bathrooms. The first time I went in there, there was pee everywhere. I was surprised that men, who are supposed to control those things, couldn't pee in the urinals.

What do you make of the new, voluptuous Lois in the current Superman comics?

I think she's great. The comic-book Lois Lane is super-sexy, and she gives me an excuse to gain weight.

Comic-book fans can be obsessive. Have you had any frightening run-ins?

When I go to conventions, I'm usually pretty open, but one fan tried to kiss me. He'd been waiting in line while I was signing, and when I looked up, he was totally in my face, lips all puckered, ready to give me a smoocher. I moved just in time and he glanced the side of my face.

Kate Bosworth is playing Lois Lane in this summer's Superman Returns. Do you want to talk some smack?

I'm not going to talk smack. I think I'm fine, and Kate Bosworth doesn't need my advice on how to play Lois either. She's been a movie star longer than I've been playing Lois on TV. I know people want me to have some secret desire for a cat fight, but I think it's cool.

What's your take on the movie?

It has a couple of hundred million dollars invested in it—the TV show doesn't have nearly that budget—so it's going to look very different. Plus, we have a completely different story line, not to mention that our show features Superman at a different time in his life. I'll definitely see the movie when it comes out. Even before Smallville, I loved the comic-book movies like Spider-Man and X-Men, so I'll go and enjoy Superman Returns like every other fan.

Fans were psyched when you went undercover as a stripper earlier this season. Did you research the role in person?

I did. A friend who's an exotic dancer trained me. I can't dance at all—if I ever had to do exotic dancing for real, I'd be

IF I WANT TO RUN AROUND NAKED, I WILL

IN THE BEDROOM YOU NEED FREEDOM AND HONESTY

booed off stage. I tried to learn the pole moves. I respect strippers—dancing on a stripper pole is very, very hard. I ended up with bruises.

What other secrets would make a more virtuous Lois Lane blush?

My husband and I have a naked household. Everybody who comes for drinks has to be naked too. When you're out, you have to wear something. When you're a kid, your parents let you run around naked all the time. I figure, it's my house. If I want to run around naked, I will. I love being naked. Talk to me in 10 years. I'll love it even more.

Lois Lane can be aggressive. Are you that way in the bedroom?

I am. Sometimes I'm aggressive about being passive—it's not always about what I like; it's what my husband likes too. Communication is the key. Sometimes you want to be like, "Oh yeah, you're the barbarian tonight." We dress up and role-play. I feel like the milkmaid some days, and my husband's the hard-working farmer, or the ranch boy who hits on the farmer's wife. To keep it lively in the bedroom you need freedom and honesty with each other. When I was practicing my exotic-dancer routine, I wore my stripper boots home because I thought that my husband would like them. And he did.

With that commitment to freedom, where is the craziest place you've had sex?

The craziest was in Paris, on a balcony overlooking the Eiffel Tower. It was very romantic. In the middle of having sex, a guy from across the way could see us. I was like, "Bonjour." He was like, "Damn it. They're always doing it on the balcony." That was a lot of fun and I have no complaints about it. When you're having that much fun on a balcony, nothing can stop you. FHM

ESPN's NFL draft guru on tight ends, trading down and the world's most coveted hair

Why is there so much hype surrounding this year's draft?

We had a national championship game where we had three big-time players—two Heisman Trophy winners, and a Rose Bowl MVP—on the field at the same time, and the game was one of the best ever. Is this draft going to be one of the best ever? You can't say that, because it's not all about Reggie Bush, Matt Leinart and Vince Young. But at the top of the draft, it doesn't get any better than this.

Besides the top three, which position is deep this year?

Tight end is uniquely different from any other year. We had three very talented tight ends decide to leave college early—Vernon Davis from Maryland, Leonard Pope from Georgia and Anthony Fasano from Notre Dame—on the heels of a senior class that was pretty good. And you say, "Well, who cares about tight ends?" It's a position that's much more in vogue. The tight end is now a key component of NFL offenses—Tony Gonzalez, Todd Heap, Antonio Gates. It's not the "who cares" position that it once was.

You're on camera the entire time during the draft. Do you even have time to eat or go to the bathroom?

I don't. I'm at the set at 8 a.m. I have to do SportsCenter cut-ins until the draft starts at noon. That goes all day, and I don't really leave until midnight. I'll have the pancakes and omelettes around 6 a.m., and I don't eat again until I get back to my hotel room at 1:30 a.m., and thankfully in New York you have 24-hour room service. I take one bathroom break a day. You're hooked up to stuff and it's really a pain to take all that off and put it back on, especially when you're live. It's grueling, because it's like a marathon.

How do you become a draft expert?

In 1979, I started putting out these reports scouting college players. I was 19 years old. I was sending the reports to NFL people and the media to see what their reaction would be. It wasn't going to fans. When I got positive commentary back from the NFL personnel people, from coaches, that made me feel like, OK, I'm on the right track here. Ernie Accorsi, the Assistant GM of the Baltimore Colts at the time, said, "Fans really crave this information. You ought to make it available to the public." And I started that in 1981.

'My hair is real. Even my daughter says I look like Eddie Munster'

Most parents would have said, "Are you nuts?"

My dad was supportive. I was in my second year at Essex Community College in Baltimore, and he said, "You can't be going to college and doing what you have to do here. The phones are ringing all day from customers calling, wanting to order the reports or just talk football. College can wait. This is a business that has a chance to be successful." How many parents would encourage their child to give up college and go into a business that nobody thought could make any money?

Did you realize at 19 that you were destined to make money on it?

Money didn't motivate me. The only thing that motivated me was the drive to be the best. Then the opportunity came to go into the NFL as a scout. Before I started with ESPN in '84, I had an opportunity with the then Baltimore Colts. Ernie Accorsi offered me a position there. I accepted it, and then that summer was when John Elway was traded, and there was talk about the Colts moving, and so it didn't work out. Thankfully for me, that fell through, and then I started with ESPN six months later.

Which player has proved your draft board wrong?

Chris Spielman. Chris will even tell you that he would put my picture on his wall, and when he woke up to train, he would take a look at that picture and do a couple hundred pushups or sit-ups. He just used my projection as a chip on his shoulder to say, "Hey, this guy questions my ability to play in the NFL. I'm gonna show him." I thought he would be a third-round or fourth-round pick. He went in the early second round, and became a heck of a player for the Detroit Lions. Chris really changed the way I evaluated players from that point on.

What about guys who people thought would be great but you proved to be right on the money?

I had Jeff George 84th when he went No. 1, and people said I was crazy. I didn't see the overall body of work that would indicate he could be a tremendously successful quarterback. You really don't know in some cases until you're two, three, four years into a pro career whether that player's going to live up to what you think he will. From the '80s to the mid-'90s, you always had two or three picks in the first round that left you shaking your head. Now they don't do that as much.

Any common drafting mistakes?

Most teams don't maneuver enough to get extra picks. I think they lock in too much on one player, and by draft day they can't give up on him, so they're reluctant to move down. The value of the third-, fourth-, fifth-, sixth-round picks should be a lot higher than it is. I'd rather have extra threes, fours and fives than just one pick in the second.

Your hair. What's the deal?

I'm stuck in the '70s! The bottom line is I'm 45 now, and I'm happy I still have some hair to talk about. People always ask me if my hair's fake. It's real. You can't rip it out. Even my daughter says I look like Eddie Munster.

Is there a draft board of chores for your wife and daughter?

They could care less about what I do. Kim, my wife, has been handling the business since 1989. She loves to play sports, but she's not a big football fan. My daughter, Lauren, she's 10, and she's a heck of an athlete, but she's not into watching football at all. My daughter doesn't even watch the draft or me on TV. She thinks it's boring. She's like, "Oh yeah, there's Dad. Now let's watch something good." FHM

Who's the best-dressed Cup driver?
I'll say myself.
What's your preferred style?
It's more of a casual, thrown-together look than anything, but as my model wife has taught me, there's work that goes into looking like you did accidentally throw it all together. I'm not a fan of ties, so if I have to dress up, I prefer a blazer, a shirt and jeans. I like John Varvatos's shoes.
What's the worst abuse you've taken from fans?
At Martinsville, the crowd is so close to you at the start of the race you can hear everything they say. The one I love is, "You suck!" I'm leading the championship, and the driver whose shirt they're wearing is 30th in points. So I'm thinking, "If I suck, the guy whose shirt you're wearing must be bad." In our sport, if they're booing you, you're doing well. As soon as you win a few races, it goes from cheers to boos. A perfect example is Carl Edwards. At the beginning of last season, he got the strongest cheers; after the driver intros in Phoenix, he said to me, "I can't believe it. I'm getting booed now."
Have you ever been asked to have sex in your race suit?
No, I haven't.
Would you do it?
Absolutely. And if I was in a burning fire, at least I'd be safe.

How would you describe your style?
It's like a cross between Bruce Springsteen and John Travolta. Bruce is a T-shirt and jeans guy, and Travolta keeps it good-looking and simple when he's out on the town.

What do you wear at the track?
I wear jeans, white T-shirts and black Adidas Sambas every day. You won't see me in my favorite jacket because the garage is full of race fans charging with open Sharpies. Before one of my first races at Daytona, I lost a suede jacket to the Sharpie.

Has your girlfriend ever made any of your favorite clothes disappear?
I wanted to throw some clothes away and she went through them first. Most of the stuff that got thrown away were T-shirts with logos and dumbass quotes on them. Here's me, typical ass guy, thinking my "Mullet Dew" shirt is awesome. Turns out it's not.

How would you define your style?
Rustic countryman. I like work boots, a T-shirt and jeans.
Who is NASCAR's worst-dressed driver?
Tony Stewart. We had an event in New York at the end of last season and everyone else there was wearing suits; he wore a suit on top and jeans on the bottom half.
What style errors will you admit to?
I did the tight-rolled-jeans thing, where you roll up the bottoms of your jeans tight twice. And I had a mullet. It was permed in the back with steps on the sides and spiked on top. I wore it for four years. Corduroy had come and gone during that time. I might bring it back, but it's tough with all the sponsors these days.
The mall parking lot on Saturday afternoon is the closest most American men come to racing. Do you have any tips?
Watch out for women on cell phones. As soon as they get out of the mall, they have to call someone about something.
Finally, what should women wear?
Just enough.

What do you wear when you're relaxing with friends?
Probably my big University of Arizona Wildcats sweatshirt. That's where I went to school. If I was going to a Cubs game with friends, I'd throw my Wrigley gear on: a low-fitted ball cap and my Cubs Starter jacket.

Are you a bitter Cubs fan or a positive one?
I'm a fan who thinks a .500 season is a great year.
Would you be OK with running middle of the pack?
No. I like to go for the wins, but you can't win every race. You can't even win half of them—if you won 18 races in a year, you'd be the heat. Consistency is key. I won three races last year and three in 2004, when I won the title. But the difference was consistent finishes and staying away from those DNFs. DNFs suck. They suck a lot.
Which track has the hottest female fans?
One is Texas Motor Speedway. The girls come dressed in skin-tight jeans and cowgirl hats. And in Charlotte, my girlfriend will bring five or six girlfriends to the track who love being there. Girls who can get their hair dirty, stand the noise and enjoy what goes on at a racetrack—those girls are on it.

Do you have any race-day clothing superstitions?
No one is supposed to wear green; that's something every driver will tell you. Last season right before the Chase, my girlfriend was wearing a green shirt. I said to her, "If it doesn't bother you, would you mind changing?" She was like, "What? Are you kidding?" She was cool about it though. And she changed her shirt.
What do you like wearing off the track?
Simple, comfortable clothes. I don't want to be the guy who wears whatever's fashionable that month. My girlfriend buys me shirts that I have to let sit in the closet for a while before I end up wearing them. She'll buy some tight T-shirt with crazy pictures or text or something on the front—something that I'd make fun of other guys for wearing. I have to work up to them.
What's your ride?
A Ford F-350, and I've got an old Mazda 323 that's still kicking. I had it fixed up at the Tuffy Muffler up the road because the exhaust was falling off. The left rear door is caved in and the windows don't go all the way down. It's by far the crappiest car at any given stoplight.

What style mistakes have you made?
I thought bandanas were cool. And I had a red velvet shirt. You needed a couple of cocktails in you to keep it on, but girls loved rubbing it because of the material. Guys made fun of it, but girls loved it, so I didn't see what the issue was. I just retired it a while back.
What advice do you have for civilian drivers?
Pay attention. I'm one of the worst passenger-car drivers ever. I run into things. I have a black BMW; I've had it fixed three times in the past eight months. I walk into the dealership and they look at me like, "What did you hit now?" I hit some landscaping rocks twice. And it can fuck the car up bad. I don't get in wrecks driving during a race—I get in wrecks going 3 mph.
Does your mind ever wander during a race?
I don't think so. If it did, you'd want to find something else to do. What you have to realize is that you're in a controlled wreck on every lap you drive in a race, you just don't hit anything.

It's Honey vs. Honey. Vote online to decide who returns as next month's champ!

Last month's results

58%	42%

I can't believe I'm back!" says East Lansing, MI's two-time Hometown Honey champion Diana Rosebush, who beat out Raven Ervin of Birmingham, AL, in last month's showdown. "Thanks to everyone who voted."

Diana returns to defend her crown against Audra Perkins from Swainsboro, GA. Will Diana triumph to become a three-time winner and only the second ever inductee into the FHM Hometown Honey Hall of Fame—and get to celebrate the fact in a solo pictorial? As always, FHM's readers will decide. Log on to FHMUS.com/honeys and vote—and may the hottest Honey win!

Swainsboro, GA

"We have to make our own fun here," says 23-year-old Audra Perkins. "That usually means hanging in the Wal-Mart parking lot. On people's farms, though, we'll tie a burlap sack behind an automatic horse-trotter and let it drag us in circles." Here are more locals-only directions to good times in Swainsboro.

Flirting pays!
"All of my girlfriends are hot. Growing up, we'd pass the time by seeing what we could get guys to buy us. If I bat my eyes at a 40-year-old man, he'll always pick up the tab for my gas or dinner. It helps me out, and it makes him happy too."

Looks compete!
"Beauty pageants are huge here in Swainsboro—people are always entering their children. When my girlfriend was crowned Miss Canoochee Catfish, her crown was as big as Miss Universe's. When I tried it on, my head tipped over."

Wood accommodates!
"At the Pine Tree Festival, which is held every May, one local gets named the Tree Sitter and gets to live in a tree house in the middle of town for a month. At the end of the month, there's a big parade. I'd be honored to be the Tree Sitter."

Too big? Too small? These three FHM reader favorites think their bosoms are perfect

CHRISSI HERBERT
AGE 21

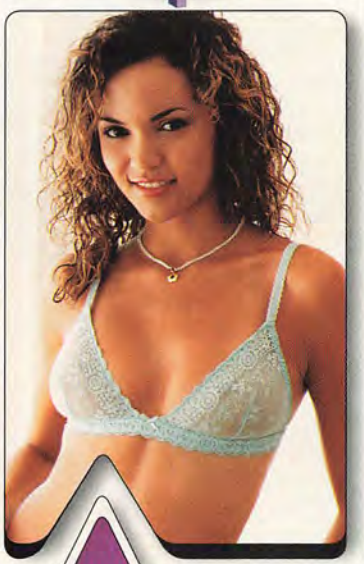
LAST SEEN
Ladies Confidential November 2005

"I like my breasts. They're 34Ds, but they look bigger because my frame is so delicate. Even when I was 13 and they were B cups, people would say to me, 'Your boobs are huge!' When I was 16, they grew into D's—and ever since then, men and women have had trouble looking me in the eye.

"They're full and natural and beautiful"

"I don't understand why men like big breasts so much—maybe because they're squishy—but they get a guy's attention like nothing else. That's good when you don't have a boyfriend, but bad when you do. I have to date guys who are secure, otherwise they get jealous when other guys stare.

"When girls tease me by saying that they look like melons, I'll turn around and say, 'Well, at least I don't have little mosquito bites.' Sometimes I stand in front of a mirror and admire them. They're full and natural and beautiful. I wouldn't want them to be any bigger, though. That would be weird."



TANISHA JONES
AGE 20

LAST SEEN
Hometown Honeys Jan./Feb. 2006

"I love having smaller breasts. They're 34Bs, which is average. For one thing, I like that they don't look fake. They're also very perky—they don't fall into my armpits when I take off my bra. And they're proportionate to my body—some girls have huge breasts but no butt, and it doesn't look right at all.

"I take off my bra whenever I can"

"On special occasions, I'll wear a push-up bra, and the men around me can't look at anything else. I don't want tons of attention, though—I try to either show off my breasts or my booty or my legs, but never all three.

"In the summer, I take off my bra whenever I can, but then I'll be in the refrigerated aisle of the grocery store and realize that everyone is staring at my super-hard nipples. My nipples are sensitive too. They're one of my favorite sexy spots, which is great because men love to play with them. In that way, everybody wins!"

ELIZABETH McLEAN
AGE 22

LAST SEEN
Lingerie World Tour December 2005

"I've had guys say to me, 'I had no idea what was under there!' when they see me without a shirt for the first time. I'm a 32DD. That's an unusual size, so I get bras custom-made. But my boobs are great: I tuck them away, then bring them out when I want. My versatile boobs are my secret weapon. That's important, because I want to be a junior high physical education teacher, and having these breasts out around boys in gym shorts would be a disaster.

"My breasts are my secret weapon"

"How much of them I show reveals how into you I am. If you see cleavage on a first date, I'm hot for you. Sometimes I wish they were smaller because they're a bouncy target when I'm playing football, but I'm glad they're not any bigger. Right now, they're still firm and sexy when my bra comes off."

1 MELISSA TOSCANO AGE 24

Bethlehem, PA

On accessories "Wearing high heels makes me feel confident and sexy, so I wear them all the time. I have one pair for cooking, a pair for grocery shopping and a pair that I've set aside for the bedroom."

2 MIRANDA McKOWN AGE 23

Altamonte Springs, FL

On personalities "People think I'm reserved when they meet me, but I'm only three vodka tonics away from becoming Rowdy 'Randa. She'll dance on your table for another round."

3 MARY DYANNE AGE 25

Buffalo, NY

On chivalry "My worst date was with a guy from West Point. He didn't speak for five hours. When I asked him questions, he replied, 'Yes, ma'am,' and, 'No, ma'am.' I almost died of boredom."

4 MEGAN WOLLOVER AGE 20

Hamilton, NJ

On appearances "I'm not the way I look at all. Because I'm pretty, guys are always amazed that I like jazz. I also play the piano and I'm a total geek. I'm like a hot girl with an ugly girl's personality."

5 YUKO NAKAHARA AGE 27

Bayside, NY

On consistency "I usually don't mind perverted guys, but if you're a quiet guy and you suddenly make some perverted comment, that's a turnoff. If you're perverted, be perverted all the time."

6 LANA TAKAYA AGE 25

Fairfax, VA

On needs "I hate stopping for bathroom breaks when I'm on the road, so I usually pee in a cup. Taco Bell cups have the sturdiest plastic. I can slide my underwear off and sit on top of them."

BROOKE JEAN

On injuries "I'm a girlie girl, but I love getting down and dirty. Guys are impressed that I own a dirt bike. When I wear bikini tops and skimpy racing shorts, you can see my battle scars."

NINA CHURCHILL
AGE 20

On changes "There's nothing worse than a guy who's sweet but who turns into a street-talking hardass when his friends are around. I guess that's what I get for dating white guys with gold teeth."

JAMIE VILLAMOR
AGE 26

Las Vegas, NV

On defense "I'm a registered second-degree black belt in tae kwon do, so my hands are legally lethal weapons. If I got in a bar fight, cops could treat me like I pulled a gun. That sucks."

10

AMRIT DHALIWAL
AGE 32

Toronto, ON

11

CILICIA TEAL
AGE 23

On love "I'm a devoted girlfriend. I once spent five days painting my boyfriend's house. A few months later, I walked in on him having sex with another woman—on our anniversary."

12

ADRIENNE SHAE
AGE 20

Maui, HI

On skill "Some men beg to be put in their place. I once went to a bar to play pool and the guys there started showing me how to rack the balls. I rolled my eyes, then I whupped their asses."

JENNIFER JOHNSON
AGE 26

Houston, TX

On discipline "I teach fourth graders, and my punishment for unruly students is to make them hold my hand in the hallway. It used to work, but now some boys act up to get punished."

HEIDI ZERBE
AGE 28

Lodi, CA

On vanity "One guy took me to dinner and spent the night looking at his reflection in a spoon. I thought, 'Does he think I can't see what he's doing?' A friend picked me up after the appetizers."

LIDIA MARIA

18

RYANNE SCHUPPERT

19

BRITNEY CRAINE

FROM THE BOSS'S DESK

Where ladies maximize the time their supervisor is out of the office

JAMIE OWENS
Age 25

When male-spa manager Jamie Owens of Fraser, MI, got sick of her boss, she did what any employee would do: She removed her shirt. Here, the 25-year-old presents conflict resolution at its best.

"When Tom hired me to run his salon, he was nice," Jamie says. "But when money got tight, he got all moody. I want to remind him that business is fun."

Become a business heroine by giving your boss the shock of a lifetime with a spread on his or her desk. Send proof of your desktop romp to From the Boss's Desk, FHM, 110 Fifth Ave., New York, NY 10011

Women of Corporate America!

"One slow day, our massage therapist Melissa took these shots of me. We were sure we'd get caught because no one knows when Tom is coming in."

"Tom will be furious when he sees this—for about two seconds. Then he'll see that the manager he hired is super-hot and that his salon is in FHM. That should put him in a good mood."

HEY! MATT GUEVARA ...

IT'S YOUR NEXT GIRLFRIEND!

Her ex was a slobbering, reptile-hurling baboon, but Veronica has her sights set on a new man. FHM's revenge page is here to help

I sell jewelry at a mall kiosk, and this guy Matt comes by every Saturday to flirt," says 21-year-old Chicago salesgirl Veronica Hidalgo. "What he doesn't know is that I'm single now, and I want to start dating him." Instead of simply using FHM's revenge page to skewer her ex, Veronica wanted to tell Matt how to seal the deal. Dude, listen up.

Swallow often

"When my ex-boyfriend kissed me, he slobbered like a bulldog until drool ran down my cheeks. He also sucked on my neck until it hurt. I hope Matt will romance me instead of using my body to mark his territory."

Respect wildlife

"I bet Matt likes kids. My ex hated them. Whenever he came to my house, he'd throw things at my 5-year-old sister to make her leave us alone—grass, the newspaper, whatever was around. Once, he threw a lizard."

Go supreme

"The closest thing to a gift my ex gave me was a piece of pizza. He called it a 'special slice,' but it was regular pepperoni. I took two bites, went to the bathroom and came back to find it finished."

Think quietly

"Sometimes I catch Matt checking out my body, so I know he likes it. I'm cool with that. My ex, though, would always say things about girls on the street, like, 'Whoa! Look at those tits!' or, 'I'd hit that.' That's retarded."

THE NEXT BOYFRIEND

Don't mention "He told me that he keeps a stuffed polar bear in his car."
